Across the country, people are expressing pain and anger from generations of systemic racism.

The murders of George Floyd in Minnesota, Ahmaud Arbery in Georgia, and countless others are horrific. Their lives mattered. Black lives matter.

Secular people of all stripes are profoundly concerned with the quality of life for all people. The persistence of endemic racist bigotry in the minds and institutions of our society are a cause that should occupy the attention of all of us.

It shall be the subject of many discussions and activities in times to come.

What is the Humanist Way?

- ♦ To extend a human centered approach to the critical problems of life & society.
- ♦ To encourage attitudes of kindness, compassion, tolerance & a loving generosity in human relationships, & in our treatment of all life. These attitudes help us to see ourselves in the lives of others, & encourage appreciation for the remarkable diversity of human culture & experience.

Wry Eye with a View

There's a story about a couple of fellows from the US Midwest who were travelling through Texas and stopped for lunch in a small town on US-84. As they were entering the town, they noted the sign announcing the name of the city: Mexia. They parked the car and as they got out, the driver said, "So this is Mexia," which he pronounced MEKS-ee-uh.

His buddy, who had been reading the maps and guidebooks said, "Actually, I believe the name is Hispanic, and the locals pronounce it as such. They call it Mexia," pronouncing it muh-HAY-uh.

"Well, that's just ridiculous," said the first guy. "How do you get an A in the middle syllable? It'd have to be an E if it's a Mexican-pronounced I in there. I'd buy it if you told me it was pronounced MAY-hee-uh, maybe."

By this time, they were inside the luncheonette, with crowds of people standing about, so the second guy says, "Okay, smart guy, let's just ask a someone who knows." He turns to an older fellow standing nearby and says, "Pardon me, sir, but my buddy and I are from out of town, and we've been disagreeing about something. I wonder if you could do me a favor and say very clearly and distinctly the name of this place?"

The old fellow smiles, nods, and very slowly says, "DARE-ee Kween."

~short but not too sweet.~

- Doctor: "You'll live to be 60!"
Patient: "I am 60!"
Doctor: "See! What did I tell you?"
- Patient: "I have a ringing in my ears."
Doctor: "Don't answer!"
- A drunk was in front of a judge. The judge says, "You've been brought here for drinking."
The drunk says "Okay, let's get started."

These words of sanguinary rectitude brought to you by Rick Okeefe.

Last month a group of academics working in the fields of development and environmental sciences in the Netherlands wrote a manifesto for post-corona recovery based on degrowth principles. This initiative gained widespread attention, pushing the degrowth agenda into (Dutch) mainstream consciousness and the traditional corridors of power.

Planning for Post-Corona: Five proposals to craft a more sustainable and equal world

COVID-19 has shaken the world. It has already led to the loss or devastation of countless lives, while many people in vital professions are working day and night to attend to the sick and stop further spread. Personal and social losses, and the fight to stop these, demand our continued respect and support. At the same time, it is critical to view this pandemic in historical context in order to avoid repeating past mistakes when we plan for the future.

The fact that COVID-19 has already had such a major economic impact is due, amongst other factors, to the economic development model that has been dominant globally over the last 30 years. This model demands ever-growing circulation of goods and people, despite the countless ecological problems and growing inequalities it generates. Over the last few weeks, the weaknesses of the neoliberal growth machine have been painfully exposed. Amongst other issues we have seen: large companies pleading for immediate state support once effective demand falls away for even a short time; insecure jobs being lost or put on hold; and further strain placed on already underfunded healthcare systems. People who recently confronted the government in their struggles for recognition and decent salaries are now, remarkably, considered to have 'vital professions' in healthcare, elderly care, public transport and education.

A further weakness of the current system, and one that is not yet prominent in discussions of the pandemic, is the link between economic development, the loss of biodiversity and important ecosystem functions, and the opportunity for diseases like COVID-19 to spread among humans. These are lethal links and could become much more so. The WHO has already estimated that, globally, 4.2 million people die each year from outdoor air pollution, and that the impacts of climate change are expected to cause 250,000 additional deaths per year between 2030 and 2050. Experts warn that with further severe degradation of ecosystems – a scenario that is to be expected under the current economic model – chances for further and even stronger virus outbreaks on top of these unfolding catastrophes are realistic.

All this requires drastic and integrated action and makes it critical to start planning for a post-COVID-19 world as soon as possible. While some short-term positive social and environmental impacts have emerged in the crisis—such as community support, local organizing and solidarity, less pollution and GHG emissions—these changes will be temporary and marginalized without concerted efforts for broader political and economic change. It is therefore necessary to envision how this current situation could lead to a more sustainable, fair, equitable, healthy, and resilient form of (economic) development going forward.

This brief manifesto signed by 174 Netherlands-based scholars aims to summarize what we know to be critical and successful policy strategies for moving forward during and after the crisis.

We propose five key policy proposals for a post-COVID-19 development model, all of which can be implemented immediately and sustained after this particular crisis has subsided:

1. A move away from development focused on aggregate GDP growth to differentiate among sectors that can grow and need investment (the so-called critical public sectors, and clean energy, education, health and more) and sectors that need to radically degrow due to their fundamental unsustainability or their role in driving continuous and excessive consumption (especially private sector oil, gas, mining, advertising, and so forth);

2. An economic framework focused on redistribution, which establishes a universal basic income rooted in a universal social policy system, a strong progressive taxation of income, profits and wealth, reduced working hours and job sharing, and recognizes care work and essential public services such as health and education for their intrinsic value;

3. Agricultural transformation towards regenerative agriculture based on biodiversity conservation, sustainable and mostly local and vegetarian food production, as well as fair agricultural employment conditions and wages;

4. Reduction of consumption and travel, with a drastic shift from luxury and wasteful consumption and travel to basic, necessary, sustainable and satisfying consumption and travel;

5. Debt cancellation, especially for workers and small business owners and for countries in the global south (both from richer countries and international financial institutions).

As academics, we are convinced that this policy vision will lead to more sustainable, equal and diverse societies based on international solidarity, and ones that can better prevent and deal with shocks and pandemics to come. For us the question is no longer whether we need to start implementing these strategies, but how we go about it. As we acknowledge those groups hardest hit by this particular crisis in the Netherlands and beyond, we can do justice to them by being proactive in ensuring that a future crisis will be much less severe, cause much less suffering or not happen at all. Together with many other communities, in the Netherlands and globally, we believe the time is right for such a positive and meaningful vision going forward. We urge politicians, policy-makers and the general public to start organizing for their implementation sooner rather than later.

We are pleased to offer legal assistance with church state separation issues as an important focus. For many people, atheism represents the most focused & powerful criticism of the philosophical world-view with which most of us were raised. It is liberating for the same reason it attracts the enmity of those who are committed to the closed & changeless narrative of unexamined traditional beliefs.

Always Vigilant

Public school prayer events are generally billed as being student-organized in order to appear constitutional.

But in reality, school staff are often actively involved, even to the extent that they're the ones organizing the event.

To stop this unconstitutional Christian proselytizing, someone needs to expose the adult organizers. That's where we come in!

Let us know of any church-state violation you may run across - restrictions, prayers, bible readings, etc. We'll take it from there. Thanks, www.aof.ngo

'Plandemic' Asks Questions—But Won't Answer Them

By Benjamin Radford, A Skeptic Reads the Newspaper, May 21, 2020

Share Tweet

Earlier this month, a YouTube video for an (apparently) upcoming documentary titled Plandemic was released by Mikki Willis (credited onscreen as “father/filmmaker” [sic]). The video features a lengthy interview with virologist Judy Mikovits, who offers scattershot conspiracy-laden assertions about the “truth” behind the COVID-19 pandemic, prefaced by claims of having been framed for a crime (she was charged with theft in 2011) and accusations of government coverups going back decades involving various medical authorities, including Dr. Anthony Fauci. Willis’s voiceover gravely warns that “for exposing their deadly secrets, the minions of Big Pharma have waged war on Dr. Mikovits,” who in the film (and in her new best-selling book the video promotes) bravely reveals “the plague of corruption that places all human life in danger.”

Dozens of claims are made in the twenty-six-minute video, some of which are unverifiable—as conspiracy theories tend to be. But many statements made by Mikovits have been investigated and proven to be misleading or simply false.

Among its claims, the video suggests that a vaccine for the virus (which of course hasn’t been developed) will be mandatory; however, no one is forced to get medical treatment. If and when a vaccine is available, federal agents armed with automatic weapons in one hand and a syringe in the other aren’t going to be bursting through doors to forcibly vaccinate anyone—paranoid conspiracy fantasies to the contrary.

It’s now been several weeks since the video was widely shared on social media, and questions have been raised by reputable journalists for publications including The Washington Post and The Atlantic, as well as Politifact. For an expert and filmmaker who claim to have been censored and silenced (with social media platforms such as Facebook and YouTube removing the video for containing dangerous misinformation), Mikovits and Willis have been strangely silent about answering legitimate questions raised about their claims.

In an effort to clarify the matter, the Center for Inquiry reviewed the video and, in collaboration with researcher Dr. Paul Offit, composed a list of eight simple questions about claims made in the video. CFI contacted Mr. Willis, who agreed in writing to respond to our questions. The next day he was provided the questions below, thanked for his cooperation, and asked to reply.

1) The Plandemic video claims that face masks “activate” coronaviruses, including SARS-CoV-2; what scientific evidence do you have that the virus is more infectious for individuals wearing masks than for those not wearing masks?

2) The video promotes hydroxychloroquine as effective against the virus (despite elevated cardiac risks and several placebo-controlled studies finding no efficacy at all). Instead of being ignored or suppressed by the medical establishment, controlled clinical trials of the drug have been performed. What is the “thousands of pages of data” answers as agreed to.

The 'Best Arguments for God's Existence' Are Actually Terrible

By Jerry A. Coyne, The New Republic, January 17, 2014, <https://bit.ly/2TkwcRj>

The most common critique leveled at New Atheists is that we attack only puerile, fundamentalist forms of religion, and never engage with the “best” arguments of the faithful: those adumbrated by Sophisticated Theologians™. Never mind that most believers accept a view of God far more anthropomorphic than a simple “ground of being” or a deistic entity that made the world and then refused to engage with it further. If you want data to support this, at least for U.S. Christians, go here. Polls consistently show that around 70-80% of Americans believe in the existence of Heaven, Hell, Satan, and angels. And let's not even discuss whether the majority of Muslims think of Allah as a “ground of being” rather than as a disembodied ruler who tells them how to behave. Anyone who claims that regular monotheists view God like Karen Armstrong's Apophatic Entity or Tillich's Ground of Being simply hasn't gotten out enough.

Further, it's obvious that the bulk of harm committed in the name of religion is done by those not who see god as a Ground of Being, but rather as an anthropomorphic entity who has a personal relationship with his minions and supplies them with a moral system. For it is the belief that God has wishes for humanity, and a code of right and wrong, that drives people to do things like oppose abortion and stem cell research, deny rights to women and gays, burn “witches,” throw acid in the faces of schoolgirls, and torture Catholics with guilt about masturbation and divorce.

The vast majority of believers don't even read theology, and are barely aware of the arguments for God made by Sophisticated Theologians™. So is it our duty as atheists to refute those arcane theological arguments, or to prevent instead the harm done by religion? To me, the latter course is preferable. Still it's both fun and intellectually profitable to read and refute the arguments of theologians, for it's only there that one can truly see intelligence so blatantly coopted and corrupted to prove what one has decided beforehand must be true. Theology is the only academic discipline where people get paid not to investigate their beliefs, but to rationalize them. Certainly it's more useful for atheists to point out to “average” believers the lack of evidence for their faith—and that is precisely what Dawkins did in The God Delusion—but it's more fun to chase the tails of obscurantists like Alvin Plantinga and John Haught.

CFI Austin Online Book Discussion: The Tangled Tree: A Radical New History of Life by David Quammen - Simon & Schuster (2018)

In The Tangled Tree, celebrated science writer David Quammen tells perhaps the grandest tale in biology: how scientists used gene sequencing to elucidate the evolutionary relationships between living beings. Charles Darwin called it the ‘great Tree of Life’. But as Quammen reveals, at the molecular level, life's history is more accurately depicted as a network, a tangled web through which organisms have been exchanging genes for more than 3 billion years. This perspective is indeed radical, and he presents the science — and the scientists involved — with patience, candour and flair.

What Is Pseudoscience?

By Mario Bunge, Skeptical Inquirer, Vol. 09, #1, Fall 1984

"Pseudoscience can be clearly distinguished from science only if a number of features are checked."

Editor Kendrick Frazier writes in the January /February issue, "[this article] is another seminal essay that listed and described several attitudes and activities by which to compare scientists and pseudoscientists. It provoked some controversy but still stands up well."

The Philosophy Behind Pseudoscience

By Mario Bunge

From: Skeptical Inquirer, Vol. 30, #4, July / August 2006

"Every intellectual endeavor, whether authentic or bogus, has an underlying philosophy. Science, for example, involves six kinds of philosophical ideas. These differ totally from those behind pseudoscience. Evaluating a field's underlying philosophy is a revealing way to make distinctions and judge worth."

In this powerful exposition of the orthogonal difference between science and pseudoscience. Editor Kendrick Frazier wrote, "In my view, 'it provides a comprehensive, explanatory, intellectual, philosophical framework for virtually every issue we address in the Skeptical Inquirer.'"

Food for Thought on BBC Shropshire Radio can be heard by going to <https://www.bbc.co.uk/sounds/play/p08b54q8> and listening on the timeline between 1:19:30 and 1:23:00.

"Don't worry I'm not going to talk lockdown, but my subject was prompted by some of the extraordinary things we hear coming out of the mouth of the current President of United States. It's pretty clear that he doesn't trust science or scientists or evidence or reason; he prefers to rely on his gut instinct, making it up as he goes along and listening to like-minded anti-science friends.

"It got me thinking. Why are so many people against science and scientists? It's hard to believe but there are international societies claiming the world is flat and that, if you walk far enough, you fall off the edge! And over 40% of the United States are young earth creationists and believe that the world, the universe, was created much as it is now about 8,000 years ago. And then there's climate change. Despite a vast amount of high-level evidence that the world is warming up due to human activity, there're many, including Trump and some UK politicians, who deny it...."

April 22 was to have been the national March for Science (in Washington, D.C.) in support of the idea that, "The whole point of science is that evidence should win over everything, regardless of the opinions you walked in the door with." "American scientists now find themselves in a strange new world of denial, fake news and alternative facts."

Should scientists march for science?

Pros: <https://n.pr/3caVBEa>

NPR: "We have often discussed how, after World War II, politicians of all parties understood that science was vital to the national good. Science provided input on policy decisions — and that was as far as it should go. If you, as a politician, didn't like that input, you could talk values or economics or any of the many other non-science things that went into policy-making. What you did not do, however, was call the science a hoax. You didn't do that because it would, eventually, undermine the whole scientific enterprise that the nation needs so badly."

Cons: <https://bit.ly/2W6XZpU>

New Republic: Famed scientist and civil rights protester Jerry Coyne says no. "To be fair, the March for Science isn't supposed to address issues of morality. "The March for Science is a celebration of science," according to organizers. "It's not about scientists or politicians; it is about the very real role that science plays in each of our lives and the need to respect and encourage research that gives us insight into the world...The March for Science champions and defends science and scientific integrity."

Inspiring equal parts wonder and wanderlust, Atlas Obscura is a phenomenon of a travel book that shot to the top of bestseller lists when it was first published and changed the way we think about the world, expanding our sense of how strange and marvelous it really is. This second edition takes readers to even more curious and unusual destinations, with more than 100 new places, dozens and dozens of new photographs, and two very special features: twelve city guides, covering Berlin, Budapest, Buenos Aires, Cairo, London, Los Angeles, Mexico City, Moscow, New York City, Paris, Shanghai, and Tokyo. Plus a foldout map with a dream itinerary for the ultimate around-the-world road trip. More a cabinet of curiosities than traditional guidebook, Atlas Obscura revels in the unexpected, the overlooked, the bizarre, and the mysterious. Here are natural wonders, like the dazzling glowworm caves in New Zealand, or a baobab tree in South Africa so large it has a pub inside

Since the election of Scott Walker, Wisconsin has been seen as ground zero for debates about the appropriate role of government in the wake of the Great Recession. In a time of rising inequality, Walker not only survived a bitterly contested recall that brought thousands of protesters to Capitol Square, he was subsequently reelected. How could this happen? How is it that the very people who stand to benefit from strong government services not only vote against the candidates who support those services but are vehemently against the very idea of big government?

With The Politics of Resentment, Katherine J. Cramer uncovers an oft-overlooked piece of the puzzle: rural political consciousness and the resentment of the "liberal elite." Rural voters are distrustful that politicians will respect the distinct values of their communities and allocate a fair share of resources. What can look like disagreements about basic political principles are therefore actually rooted in something even more fundamental: who we are as people and how closely a candidate's social identity matches our own. Using Scott Walker and Wisconsin's prominent and protracted debate about the appropriate role of government, Cramer illuminates the contours of rural consciousness, showing how place-based identities profoundly influence how people understand politics, regardless of whether urban politicians and their supporters really do shortchange or look down on those living in the country.

The Politics of Resentment shows that rural resentment—no less than partisanship, race, or class—plays a major role in dividing America against itself.

Corona Virus from a Freethinkers Perspective

By Norm R. Allen Jr.

Paul Kurtz Institute for Science and Human Values

COVID-19 and the fears it has generated have resulted in a tsunami of irrationality, ignorance, paranoia, conspiracy theories and danger. Perhaps the biggest danger is posed by religious fanatics who actually believe they can pray sickness away. They still do not have even a simple understanding of germ theory. They still believe in laying on of (washed or unwashed) hands and driving out evil spirits from the body.

Not only did Jesus supposedly heal the sick, but religionists love to quote Psalm 91, “the prayer of protection.” Verses three and six say that God will protect believers from pestilence. Verse 10 says that God will protect them from “any plague.” (Incidentally, worshippers certainly could have used divine intervention during the Black Death during the 14th Century.)

More responsible religious leaders have been forced to concede the futility of prayer during major health crises. As atheist writer and blogger Hermant Mehta observed, “God is no match for a public health crisis.” (“Faith Healers Had to Postpone an Event Due to the Coronavirus,” patheos.com, 3-17-20. Could a headline get any more ironic than that?)

Nigerian humanist and skeptic Leo Igwe wrote an excellent article for opinionnigeria.com titled “Coronavirus and Reality Check for all Religions” (3-18-20.) He noted that Vatican City is locked down, churches are removing holy water and suspending communion, Mecca and Medina are deserted, the Kaaba, the sacred Muslim shrine at Mecca is closed to worshippers, the Saudi government has banned pilgrimages, worshippers are discouraged from going to Lourdes, Iran has cancelled Friday prayers, and so forth. (Pilgrims have also stopped traveling to Medjugorje in Bosnia.) All of this prompted Igwe to conclude that, not fear of the Lord, but “...the fear of the coronavirus...has become the beginning of wisdom.”

(In another bit of non-stop irony, Iranian-trained Iraqi Shia scholar Hadi Al-Modarresi said coronavirus was a curse from God delivered to the Chinese for their mistreatment of Muslims and disrespect of Islam. However, not only is Iran among the hardest hit by the virus, but Al-Modarresi contracted coronavirus weeks after making his proclamation.)

Sadly, true believers plug on. Jerry Falwell Jr. reopened Liberty University and about 12 students were found to have symptoms of COVID-19. In New York City, the mayor is contending with Orthodox Jews and other religionists that insist upon keeping their houses of worship open. White evangelicals are complaining that shutting down houses of worship due to a major health crisis goes against religious freedom. Catholic Cardinal Raymond Burke says that churches must remain open because they are “essential.” (Again, the Black Death spread like wildfire in churches.) Virginia Pastor Landon Spradlin complained about alleged anti-Trump “mass hysteria” surrounding coronavirus. He ignored health concerns and traveled to New Orleans for Mardi Gras outreach. He died from COVID-19 in Concord, North Carolina at the age of 66 on Wednesday, March 25, 2020.

There is much religious insanity out there. But what would a pandemic be without paranoid conspiracy theories and lazy, sloppy thinking? At one time, some Blacks were saying that Black people could not get coronavirus. Some said that there is “no coronavirus in the ghetto.” After Black luminaries such as actor Idris Alba and basketball star Kevin Durant contracted the virus, that kind of talk died down.

Congressman Rep. Bobby Rush angrily attacked the CEOs of Facebook and Twitter for allowing this kind of race-based misinformation. In particular, he quoted a tweet from John McAfee, a businessman and computer programmer, who tweeted “Coronavirus cannot attack black people because it is a Chinese virus.” Rush, a democrat from Illinois, said that allowing this kind of misinformation makes social media “COMPLICIT” in any harm that could come to African Americans as a result of it.

Donald Trump, the conspiracy-theorist-in-Chief, originally complained that the alleged hysteria was propagated by Democrats trying to oust him in the next election. (Irony Alert!) Ron Paul, the father of Senator Rand Paul, said that coronavirus is a hoax. A week later, Rand Paul tested positive for it. (Rand Paul was the lone senator to vote against an $8 billion bill to help fight against coronavirus.)

Some believe that coronavirus is being used as biological warfare. Franciscan Father Quirino Salomone of Italy, an “exorcist,” claimed that COVID-19 is a chemical weapon that the Chinese produced in a lab. People are selling phony coronavirus tests and all kinds of other conspiracy theories are to be found throughout social media.

The bottom line is that human beings must work to eradicate disease. “No God will save us. We must save ourselves.” All throughout history this has been the case. Scientists and medical experts throughout the world must pull together to protect the human species. China and Cuba have already made progress in this regard. And as Ian Bremmer in the April 6-13, 2020 issue of Time points out, “Washington and Beijing could invest cash and scientific expertise in a joint bid to develop treatments and a vaccine.” (“China and America’s blame game over COVID-19 hurts everyone,” p. 25) Indeed, human ingenuity is our greatest and most realistic hope. How could it be otherwise?

He is currently writing a third book, Secular, Successful, and Black: 25 Profiles. For 21 years, Allen had been the first and only full-time African American secular humanist to travel the world promoting secular humanism. He has spoken on numerous radio and television shows including National Public Radio and to 72 humanist groups in 30 African nations. His writings have appeared in numerous books and encyclopedias, including Voices for Evolution, published by the National Center for Science Education.

Humanist Families of Greater Tampa

Jennifer Hancock started this organization several years ago. It uniquely serves Humanist families with a variety of wonderful programs throughout the year. We strongly emphasize creative childrearing. You can connect with other families dealing with the same problems of living in a society that is still hostile to an explicitly humanist way of life.

Jennifer wrote three books: The Humanist Handbook, The Humanist Approach to Happiness, & The Bully Vaccine.

Humanist Families organizes social outings every month. Come and do something fun, socialize, enjoy each other's company. Sometimes we go to a park, a museum, go swimming, & sometimes we leave the kids at home. We organize Tampa & Manatee/Sarasota area outings every month.

Throughout the year we host parties like Darwin Day in February, World Humanist Day in June, Freethought Day at Disney in October, & Carl Sagan Day in November. Among our spin off groups is a Parenting Beyond Belief group which gets together to discuss the challenges of raising children without religion. Please join us on Facebook.

Thanks, Jennifer Hancock

A Look Back Could Help Us Go Forward.

We meet monthly to escape shallow, petty talk and to ponder broad, complex yet practical subjects. We expect members to proffer evidence and use logic in conclusions, but expect all present to keep the meeting FUN for all. We teach, and don't scold. We expect the conversation to move without getting stuck so sometimes, we are forced to "agree to disagree" and move on.

We arrive and part as friends. There are no personal attacks, but each IDEA goes under the microscope. Members agree, others disagree, often with enthusiasm! We have no gates, and no gatekeepers. All are welcome and we tolerate no personal attacks, sarcasm, or even indirect denigration. IDEAS RULE and stand on their own. Finally, we are "thinkers", not "doers". Come, join us, participate, learn, exercise your brain, but mostly HAVE FUN.

Humanistic Jews of Tampa Bay welcomes all who are interested in Jewish history, culture, and tradition independent of supernatural explanations. We believe human beings are responsible for their own choices and making the world a better place through science and reason. Join us for discussions, lectures, cultural events, and holiday celebrations using a Humanistic lens.

Ethical Humanism, also called Ethical Culture, is an evolving body of ideas that inspires Ethical Societies. Humanism is a progressive philosophy of life that, without supernaturalism, affirms our ability and responsibility to lead ethical lives of personal fulfillment that aspire to the greater good of humanity (Humanist Manifesto III). For Ethical Humanists, the ultimate religious questions are not about the existence of gods or an afterlife, but rather, "How can we create meaningfulness in this life?" and "How should we treat each other?"

The American Ethical Union was founded in 1877 by Felix Adler in New York, and currently has over 30 member societies.

Evolve Fish is a source for freethought paraphernalia: <http://evolvefish.com/>

An expert on the psychology of belief examines how our thoughts and feelings, actions and reactions, respond not to the world as it actually is but to the world as we believe it to be. This book explores the psychology of belief - how beliefs are formed, how they are influenced both by internal factors, such as perception, memory, reason, emotion, and prior beliefs, as well as external factors, such as experience, identification with a group, social pressure, and manipulation. It also reveals how vulnerable beliefs are to error, and how they can be held with great confidence even when factually false. The author, a social psychologist who specializes in the psychology of belief, elucidates how the brain and nervous system function to create the perceptions, memories, and emotions that shape belief. He explains how and why distorted perceptions, false memories, and inappropriate emotional reactions that sometimes lead us to embrace false beliefs are natural products of mental functioning. He also shows why it is so difficult to change our beliefs when they collide with contradictions. Covering a wide range -- from self-perception and the perceived validity of everyday experience to paranormal, religious, and even fatal beliefs--the book demonstrates how crucial beliefs are to molding our experience and why they have such a powerful hold on our behavior.

So-called alternative medicine (SCAM) is a complex and controversial subject. Many people pretend to be experts in SCAM, but few know even the basic facts about it. Many consumers talk about SCAM, but few can be bothered to look behind the smokescreen of misleading claims. Many feel emotionally attached to SCAM, but few manage to think rationally about it. Many religiously believe in SCAM, but few show concern about the evidence. Many are desperate for help, but few seem to mind getting ripped off...

Enthusiasts of SCAM tend to hope for less side-effects, symptom relief, a cure of their condition, improvements in quality of life, and protection from illness. Such high expectations are usually based on misinformation, often even on outright lies. The disappointing truth is that not many SCAMs are truly effective in treating or preventing disease, and that none is totally harmless. In fact, the dangers of SCAM are multi-fold and potentially serious:

In this book, I address these issues in detail and explain how consumers get manipulated ... If my book enables you to question nonsense, call out untruths, correct falsehoods, ridicule stupidity, and disclose fake news, it surely was worth the effort.

This volume has 41 chapters written to honor the 100th birthday of Mario Bunge. It celebrates the work of this influential Argentine/Canadian physicist and philosopher. Contributions show the value of Bunge's science-informed philosophy and his systematic approach to philosophical problems.

The chapters explore the exceptionally wide spectrum of Bunge's contributions to: metaphysics, methodology and philosophy of science, philosophy of mathematics, philosophy of physics, philosophy of psychology, philosophy of social science, philosophy of biology, philosophy of technology, moral philosophy, social and political philosophy, medical philosophy, and education. The contributors include scholars from 16 countries.

Bunge combines ontological realism with epistemological fallibilism. He believes that science provides the best and most warranted knowledge of the natural and social world, and that such knowledge is the only sound basis for moral decision making and social and political reform. Bunge argues for the unity of knowledge.

Carl Zimmer presents a history of our understanding of heredity in this sweeping, resonating overview of a force that shaped human society--a force set to shape our future even more radically.

She Has Her Mother's Laugh presents a profoundly original perspective on what we pass along from generation to generation. Charles Darwin played a crucial part in turning heredity into a scientific question, and yet he failed spectacularly to answer it. The birth of genetics in the early 1900s seemed to do precisely that. Gradually, people translated their old notions about heredity into a language of genes. As the technology for studying genes became cheaper, millions of people ordered genetic tests to link themselves to missing parents, to distant ancestors, to ethnic identities.

... Weaving historical and current scientific research, his own experience with his two daughters, and the kind of original reporting expected of one of the world's best science journalists, Zimmer ultimately unpacks urgent bioethical quandaries arising from new biomedical technologies, but also long-standing presumptions about who we really are and what we can pass on to future generations.
