Compassionate Humanists?

When most people think of humanists, they think: Intellectual? Atheist? Godless? Anti-religion? Anti-establishment? Self-centered? Mean spirited? ... and on ad-infinity. The fact is that sometimes they are quite right. However, the humanists I know, besides being very independent thinkers, are also some of the most kind, caring, altruistic and considerate people I have ever met. Where is the disconnect? I believe that the disconnect is only a matter of perception.

Many, if not all of us, have had a tendency to live mostly in our heads and pursue our own definitions of truth, sometimes courageously and publicly, but most of the time anonymously or in our small group of humanist acquaintances. However, we are also individuals who believe that we must act in this world, not in some future "world to come". The fact remains that, in general, we are not understood, or even worse, misunderstood. We need to let the world know that we have much more in common with all of them that what separates us from them; after all, we are sharing the same planet and the same environment. It is in this light that I am suggesting a few ideas that would enhance our public perception without compromising our principles.

We become signatories on religious historian, Karen Armstrong's "Charter for Compassion", which came about as a result of a Ted Talk presented by Armstrong, and resulted in her being presented with the "Ted" award, which enabled her to initiate the Charter. While, at first it was conceived as a means to get religions to find a "common denominator" for agreement, now whole cities have become signatories and I don't think that there is anything in the Charter that we, as humanists, couldn't endorse. You can find more about the organization and the full Charter at The Charter for Compassion's web site: charterforcompassion.org. She also has written a book called "Twelve Steps to a Compassionate Life".

Our food bank donations are very worthwhile, if not publicly known. However, I believe that we should become publicly involved, as humanists, in Tampa Bay social justice organizations. A couple of examples where we might start are FAST (Faith and Action for Strength Together) in Pinellas County and HOPE (Hillsborough Organization for Progress and Equality) in Hillsborough County. Both organizations have been very effective in influencing public policy in areas of job creation, literacy, healthcare and affordable housing.

I don't think that we would have to look very far to find other organizations where we could become effective. I believe that it is time to stop relinquishing matters of injustice and caring to faith communities, after all, as humanists, we are committed to improving the earth and its inhabitants here and now. That is our only reward.

We are compassionate, not because we fear the "loss of heaven or the pains of hell", but because it is the right thing to do.

Bruce Gotts

Author, Luis Granados speaks of the price of courage at a recent Tampa Humanist Assoc. meeting.

Bruce Gott's call for more social responsibility is addressed to the Humanist Society, but its important message applies with equal urgency to all freethought organizations.

As our movement grows stronger each day, it is important to emphasize our social consciousness, and the imperative it creates to make ourselves more involved in the well being of the entire community. If you have insights or ideas on this question, please send a letter or essay to the News.

Humanism goes to the Dogs

Some of our best Friends; Good & Bad!

Our experience of the world can often lead to a fine veneer of cynicism toward the pillars of our erstwhile civilization. Famous for his laudatory mention by Alexander the Great, the surly, lantern-toting Diogenes of Sinope was called Kynos -- Greek for dog -- for his lifestyle and contrariness. It was from this word for dog that we get the word Cynicism. Diogenes of Sinope is also known for his cosmopolitanism, literally. When asked where he was from he said he was a citizen of the kosmos (world). Perhaps it is time to explore the relationship between our precursors and our canine companions in this consideration by Seth D. Pevnick, Ph.D. Chief Curator/Richard E. Perry Curator of Greek and Roman Art at the Tampa Museum of Art.

This lecture begins with an introduction to the three main types of dogs distinguishable in ancient Greek and Roman art—lap dogs, hunting dogs, and guard dogs, respectively. We will then look in closer detail at some especially interesting examples of each of these types, particularly in non-mythological scenes painted on Greek black-figure and red-figure pottery of the 6th and 5th centuries BC. As with the dogs described by ancient authors (and often as with our own dogs today), we shall see a wide range of canine behavior, from the delightful to the disgusting. In addition to the unequivocally good dogs that quite clearly do their masters' bidding, and the unequivocally bad ones that bite, thief, and otherwise make mischief, we find a few extraordinary dogs that defy easy classification.

Food: the first kindness. Humanists aspire to true friendship with our fellow human beings.

An important measure of this concern is care for the physical well being of others. There is increasing hunger here in our community. Don't forget to bring canned and boxed food or checks for:

Evolving a Humanist Ethic With Virginia Kohl, Ph.D

Gin is a member of the Tampa Humanists Association board, a former executive director of the Humanists of Florida Association (HFA), and was author of the educational program of Carl Sagan Academy in east Tampa – the first Humanist charter school in the country.

She served on the HFA board in 2002, when that year's conference, "Planting seeds for a more Humanistic world" included USF educational historian Sherman Dorn's presentation on think tanks, which foreshadowed the creation of the Evolution Institute: At the recommendation of Ambassador to Nepal Carl Koon, then HFA President Jerry Lieberman contacted evolutionary biologist David Sloan Wilson in 2007, and within a year's time, the Evolution Institute (EI) was created as a scientific think tank.

To date, EI has addressed social challenges from understanding early childhood learning and risky adolescent behavior to the "rational actor" model in behavioral economics, failed nation states, and ranking life quality.

Gin will primarily address quality of life (QOL), as introduced at the 2011 Memphis workshop and through the anticipated October 2013 conference in Oslo, Norway. She will contrast the lives of people in Memphis with those in Oslo, Norway, by utilizing various indices of Quality of Life

She will cite such instances where Norway is unique in meeting human needs. Whether or not the practices and policies of Norway can be applied and adopted to other nations is subject to reasonable and legitimate debate. What is not in contention is the track record of Norway in achieving universal recognition for its highest ranking in QOL by highly reputable sources.

Such instruments as The United Nations Human Development Index (UNHDI) has established a top-ranking for Norway when life quality issues are measured. Among the many parameters studied, the role of innovation was particularly intriguing. For some reason, the development of new industries that are less closely linked to natural resources, in spite of considerable support from public policy, has been much less successful in Norway." This suggests that "high tech" does not always lead development, a fact that ambitious underdeveloped countries will find to be of value. This has important implications for the future of our world and the progress of humanity.

A Humanist Helping Hand

Several members have formed a caring response team to help members of our Humanist family who may need supportive practical help. This is an independent group, not affiliated directly with the Humanist Society. But their efforts are wholly consistent with the Humanist outlook. Clearwater UU Humanists

We are a group of Unitarian Universalists committed to a humanistic and non-theistic worldview. Currently, meetings are scheduled once a month and are usually held on the third Sunday of most months from 12.30 pm to 1:30 pm, after UU services.

The UU Humanists are open to all aspects of humanism, including investigation of religious humanism. However, the focus of the group is on secular aspects of humanism.

Programs have been well received with attendance between 50 and 75. To learn more, please contact: co-facilitators: Bill Norsworthy bnorsworthy@verizon.net Mark Brandt mwbrandt@mail.usf.edu Web site: www.uuclearwater.org

Clearwater, Florida

UU Humanists will have its monthly meeting on Sunday, April 21, 12:30 at the Octagon, at the Unitarian Universalists of Clearwater campus, located at 2470 Nursery Road, Clearwater. The speaker will be Ed Ericson, a co-founder of the Ethical Culture Society. He will be speaking on: Separating Reality from Myth in early Christianity. This should be a very interesting speaker and topic.

*Florida
Now*

<http://www.flnow.org/>

NOW is a multi-issue political organization. NOW's self-defined role has been to initiate change for the benefit of the greatest number of people, to affect the legal and institutional structures of the society in a way that systematically expands the choices and possibilities available to all women. In this way, NOW takes action to bring women, as a class, into the mainstream of society, rather than offering aid to individual women in achieving personal solutions or temporary relief from oppression.

The Florida National Organization for Women (NOW) is in strong opposition to the Personhood Amendment ballot initiative for which the organization Personhood Florida is currently collecting signatures, according to Florida NOW president Donna Slutiak. "This amendment is ridiculous and an insult to women," Slutiak said. "The issue of Personhood would have very far reaching results, and would do more than criminalize abortion; it would also make birth control pills and the IUD illegal in the state of Florida. The amendment states that human life begins at the time when an egg is fertilized, which will also impact in-vitro-fertilization clinics. How would you like your mother's fertilized eggs that are sitting in a clinic freezer to have inheritance rights? Do you want to have to go underground to get your birth control pills?" Florida NOW expects all intelligent people to pledge not to sign this initiative, and to vote against it, if by some fluke it does get on the ballot. Personhood is bad for womanhood."

FLORIDA REPORT

Civil liberties news in the Sunshine State

Dear ACLU supporter,

The feds know exactly what you bought last night—or they could very soon, thanks to a proposed law that encourages companies to share data with government agencies like the CIA or NSA for cybersecurity purposes.

So get ready for powerful people in secret places to access your personal details on anything from the websites you browsed last night to that present you bought two years ago.

But, luckily, there's a way to stop CISA (the Cyber Intelligence Sharing and Protection Act) dead in its tracks —by ensuring that President Obama would veto the bill if it ever got to his desk.

CISA was recently reintroduced in the House, but a veto threat would kill the bill before it gets traction, and send a powerful message to Congress that any legislation that indiscriminately violates online privacy is dead in the water.

Just last year, thousands joined together in opposition to CISA, and WON. Obama threatened to veto the bill last year, but in order to protect privacy online, we have to do it again.

Urge President Obama to tell Congress now that he'll veto CISA if it lands on his desk.

CISA would give companies unprecedented power to obtain your information, including from private communications, and hand it over to the government without a warrant if they believe it is relevant to cybersecurity. But it also allows the use of your personal data for reasons completely unrelated to cybersecurity, even granting immunity to companies who share your data with other companies.

CISA supporters are using the specter of cybersecurity threats to execute a naked power grab for companies and the government, but we're not actually safer if it comes at the expense of our fundamental rights.

With so many pressing fights coming up, Congress won't waste time pushing a bill they know Obama will veto. We stopped this bill before, and with tens of thousands of us coming together, we can do it again.

For several years now, various leaders of the Freethought community in the bay area have been meeting informally to share experiences, and occasionally to coordinate plans. But recently, changing circumstances have brought additional pressure to cooperate in bringing programs and members services to an expanding movement.

At this point leaders continue to meet, and together with the various boards of directors and committees, try to develop policies that will enable every group to enhance its unique role in serving its members.

There appears to be general agreement on developing several community wide programs over the year that will allow significant speakers to be presented in our area. The costs of these programs will be shared among the organizations proportionally.

Thus substantive and exciting new activities will be offered to the Tampa Bay area that were not possible for most organizations before. We are especially grateful to the national office of the United Coalition of Reason and its director, Fred Edwards. You may recall that UCoR was the major impetus to getting a large number of billboards erected across the nation with such messages as "You can be good without God. Millions are!"

TBCoR is an alliance of groups identified with the freethought / Humanist /Atheist movement.

As this momentum continues to grow, we will keep you informed of developments. JP

A Great President

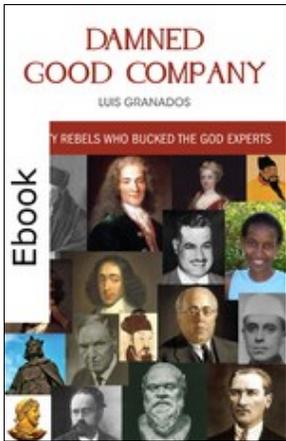

President Obama should use his executive powers to arrest or reverse the most dangerous, climate-related practices. Most of these involve the extraction, transport, and burning of coal and other hydrocarbon fuels. Obama should, for example, shut down existing coal-fired power plants and make new ones impossible to permit; strictly regulate or ban coal exports; ban the importation or sale of liquid fuels from tar sands and coal liquefaction; accelerate the federal drive to electrify our vehicle fleet, and follow the rest of the industrialized world (even China!) in building a nationwide grid of high-speed electric trains. It is not enough to complain that Congress won't act. The president can and must do what has to be done.

Obama should deploy the U.S. military in the climate cause. No part of the federal government is more energy intensive, or energy aware than the U.S. Army, Navy, Air Force, and Marines. Rabid interest in ultra efficient, distributed, and renewable energy sources permeates all branches of the armed services. Every military facility should feature "living buildings," coated with solar panels and tied together in smart, hack-proof micro grids. The U.S. military has been the birthplace of many historic firsts, including racial integration and the GI Bill. Today, the Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency might be the best cutting-edge science organization in the nation.

"Organizing for Action," Obama's new advocacy group, should unleash a massive grassroots climate brigade. If Obama brings the full strength of his bully pulpit to bear on the climate issue; marshals the independent power of the cabinet departments and agencies; inspires the nation's technical genius and entrepreneurial talent to rise to the challenge; and mobilizes the 80 percent of Americans who will support him on his quest to overcome the inertia and save the planet, he will join the tiny pantheon of great presidents, the ones who make us proud to be Americans.

I am happy to announce the third season of the International Freethought Film Festival, and excited that I will be able to work face to face with individuals in the Orlando area to make it a success. This year we have added a screenwriting category, and the winning short script will be developed as our very first project to launch our production branch.

Freethought Film Festival Foundation

Promoting Reason Through Film

As thrilled as I am to be once again immersed in the planning of the fest, acquiring the motivation to actively move forward on the planning for season three of IFFF took me months of painful reflection on last years event. I wasn't certain that I could break through the paralysis brought on by the disappointment of the poor turnout back in August. All of my efforts are voluntary, and it was truly disheartening for me that so few seemed to care about our mission of promoting reason through film.

The combination of the tragic movie theater shooting in Aurora, Colorado that occurred just eight miles from the film fest venues a week prior to our kickoff; and what I felt was a let down by the secular movement in promoting IFFF 2012; were the primary reasons behind the low attendance. Each event and screening was executed as planned; and those who did attend had a great time and enjoyed the program of films and camaraderie. Freethought got some great press out of it as well!

Unfortunately, ticket sales did not cover all of the venue costs, and we are still in arrears from last season. As disconcerting as this is for me, my efforts go on. I know that the International Freethought Film Festival is worthy of support; and I know that there are freethinkers who care. I am passionate about our mission of promoting reason through film, and feel strongly that it contributes to the necessary dialogue that counters irrational thought and superstitious beliefs, and the evils that can result from them.

I am still alive and kicking, but I can't do this alone. FFFF needs help from individuals who want to ensure that the International Freethought Festival grows. We are a nonprofit that is 100% independent--which means we receive zero funding from other organizations. As such, our programming is not subject to the influence thereof.

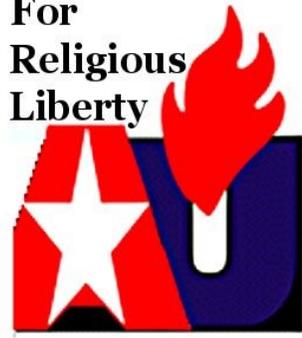

If you can afford to make a even the smallest donation to FFFF, please show your support by stopping by www.freethoughtfilmfest.org and contributing.

Humanist Families of Greater Tampa

Jennifer Hancock started this organization several years ago. It uniquely serves Humanist families with a variety of wonderful programs throughout the year.

There is a strong emphasis on creative childrearing. Here, you can make connection with other families dealing with the problems of living in a society that is still hostile to an explicitly Humanist Way of life.

Jennifer is author of several books including; The Humanist Handbook, The Humanist Approach to Happiness, and her latest book, The Bully Vaccine (illustration below). - JP

Humanist Families organizes social outings every month. These are opportunities to do something fun, socialize and enjoy each other's company. Sometimes we go to a park, sometimes a museum, sometimes we go swimming. Our group has grown over the past year to the point we now organize Tampa area outings and Manatee/Sarasota area outings every month.

Throughout the year we host parties like Darwin Day in February, World Humanist Day in June, Freethought Day at Disney in October and Carl Sagan Day in November.

Among our spin off groups, is a Parenting Beyond Belief group which gets together to discuss the challenges of raising children without religion. We are on Facebook at: <http://www.facebook.com/groups/HumanistFamiliesTampa/>

Today's topic is:

Ethics Requires Courage

A big part of being a Humanist is being committed to being an ethical person. The question is, why is being good so hard? Why do we keep having to remind ourselves to be ethical?

I don't know what the answer to that question is, but I do know that it not only feels good to remind myself of the need to be ethical, but making a habit of being good helps me feel better about myself and serves as a reminder to myself to act in accordance with my values when I am stressed out or otherwise not at my best.

Here are three recent essays I've written on this topic:

HUMANISTS CAN MAKE A DIFFERENCE IN A CHILD'S LIFE

The need is great. All it takes is about an hour out of a day and the commitment to show up once a week. The feeling of having helped is most gratifying. How can we as Humanists not act to impact a child in the inner city in a positive manner?

YOU can give a child a much-needed hour of personal attention that will encourage reading and just might help them to move forward while improving their self-esteem.

In two 1-hour sessions, I have encountered children, some of whom have already had to repeat kindergarten, that barely recognize or are able to say the alphabet or the sound of the letter. This is half way through the school year. In two 1-hour sessions, 3 third-grade girls are unable to break down or sound out a word. They cannot grasp the concept of context since they are still struggling with the words.

Teachers struggle with discipline issues and the pressure of preparing the children for FCAT testing. With patience and intensive learning, you can help these children grow into their potential.

Diverse Set of Thinkers to Ponder Ethics, Science, Secularism, and the Human Future at ISHV's 2013 Columbia University Symposium

The Institute for Science and Human Values (ISHV) will convene its Third Annual Symposium at Columbia University in New York City on April 12-13, 2013. The theme for this year's event is "The Human Prospect and the Fate of Our Planetary Civilization: Science, Humanism, Ethics, and the Task Before Us." A distinguished cast of scientists, scholars and authors will assemble for an interdisciplinary examination of pressing issues at the forefront of humanism and society today. Discussions will center on how organized secular humanism can be translated into an effective public philosophy of pragmatic action and persuasion. Featured prominently will be Dr. Philip Kitcher, author of Living with Darwin and John Dewey Professor of Philosophy at Columbia, who will be fresh from delivering the prestigious 2013 Terry Lectures at Yale University on the topic of "Secular Humanism." Also among the powerful roster of speakers will be Rebecca Goldstein, Ronald Aronson, Susan Jacoby, James Giordano, Lindsay Beyerstein, John Shook, Toni Van Pelt, Terry O'Neill, Dr. Ron Miller, Bob Bindschadler, Stuart Jordan, Nel Noddings, Larry Hickman, Jacques Berlinerblau, Barry Kosmin, Anthony Pinn, and Linda LaScola.

"The overall theme of this event, our third yearly symposium, was conceived by our founder and former chairman, Paul Kurtz. Indeed, helping us plan for this was one of the final projects undertaken by Paul," said Stuart Jordan, president of ISHV. "We are sorry that he didn't live long enough to attend this special gathering, but we are happy to announce that the entire event will be dedicated to his memory, and quite appropriately so, as Columbia was his alma mater."

The full symposium program can be viewed online at, <http://instituteforscienceandhumanvalues.net/articles/symposiums-conferences/symposium-programs.htm>

Registration is $175 for the general public and $60 for students (valid student ID required at door and limited to 25 students). The symposium will commence on Friday evening, April 12 and run from 6:00 p.m. to 9:00 p.m. The all-day Saturday session on April 13 will begin at 8:30 a.m. and conclude at 6:00 p.m.

What We Achieved Together in 2012: CFI Releases its First Annual Report

2012 was a momentous year for the Center for Inquiry and its affiliates. Just as national and world events confronted the secular and skeptic movements with new and unprecedented challenges and opportunities, CFI was at the center of it all, with ambitious new projects, unforgettable events, and powerful campaigns.

To encapsulate and reflect upon the year gone by, and to look with fresh eyes at 2013, the Center for Inquiry presents its Annual Report for 2012. This is the first time CFI has produced such a report, and given all that has happened and all that we have planned, 2012 proved to be a year that demanded this kind of documentation.

We tell the story of 2012 from the perspective of the three main pillars of CFI's work:

Advocacy: Working for science and secular values in public policy in areas such as equal treatment for the nonreligious, church-state separation, and science-based health policy. Internationally, bringing our expertise and activism to work on behalf of the freedom of expression and combatting the persecution of nonbelievers.

Community: Building networks at the local, state, national, and international levels, as well as on college and high school campuses, providing support and camaraderie to those who seek meaningful interaction with their fellow human beings outside of religion. National conferences and dynamic local events fueled debate and discussion among a growing and dynamic freethought community throughout the year.

Inquiry: Enlightening minds of all ages and inspiring the innate human desire to learn and explore, with educational programs, world-renowned publications, paranormal investigations, and even a summer camp for the young and inquisitive.

In addition, this report also updates the reader on what's been going on at CFI as an organization, including changes in staff and leadership, highlights of our presence in the media, CFI's work as a multimedia platform unto itself, as well as a listing of our major donors.

The 2012 Annual Report can be downloaded here in PDF format. Take a look back at all we achieved together in 2012, and get ready for an even more amazing 2013.

Center for Inquiry Joins Coalition to Repeal DOMA

The Respect for Marriage Coalition, an initiative made up of a wide variety of groups pushing for the repeal of the Defense of Marriage Act (DOMA), welcomed the Center for Inquiry (CFI), the first explicitly secularist group to join. CFI takes its place with other influential groups in the coalition such as the Human Rights Campaign, ACLU, AFL-CIO, Center for American Progress, SEIU, and many others.

"We are proud to be a part of this powerful roster of organizations fighting for marriage equality," said Ronald A. Lindsay, president and CEO of CFI. "CFI's mission has always been to foster a society based on reason and science, and opposition to marriage equality is based on neither but stems from a stubborn adherence to outmoded religious dogma. We also believe in the values of secular humanism, a worldview that asserts the intrinsic equality of every human being, regardless of their sexual orientation."

The Center for Inquiry has long been a strong advocate of marriage equality and of LGBT rights generally, particularly as an international advocate for government's disentanglement from religion, which is used as a common justification for limiting or revoking LGBT rights. CFI recently joined 22 other faith-based and humanist groups in urging the Obama administration to ban anti-LGBT discrimination by federal contractors, and has produced a position paper in support of same-sex marriage rights.

"With a new office and expanded staff now in place in Washington, D.C., the Office of Public Policy is renewing its dedication to achieving marriage equality across the United States," said Michael De Dora, director of CFI's Office of Public Policy. "Joining the Respect for Marriage Coalition will be integral to accomplishing this goal. We look forward to working with all of the member organizations."

The Respect for Marriage Coalition describes itself on its website as "a partnership of more than 80 civil rights, faith, health, labor, business, legal, LGBT, student, and women's organizations working together to end the Defense of Marriage Act (DOMA) and grow support for the freedom to marry."

What is Tampa Bay Skeptics?

Founded in 1988, Tampa Bay Skeptics is a nonprofit educational and scientific organization devoted to the critical examination of paranormal and fringe-science claims, and the dissemination of factual information about such claims. In 2004, TBS became a Special Interest Group of the Center For Inquiry–Tampa Bay.

Particular areas of interest to TBS include UFOs, "psychic" power, astrology, fringe science & medicine, purported miracles and other New Age claims. Our interest in religion is restricted to claims that can be objectively tested and potentially verified, such as "weeping icons" or miraculous healings.

TBS conducts its own investigations, follows the activities of other skeptics groups, monitors the press coverage of the paranormal, and publishes a quarterly newsletter, Tampa Bay Skeptics Report, which is also distributed gratis to members of the press and to many other skeptics groups around the world. TBS also makes its representatives available to local and national media to provide a skeptical voice as a counterweight to the irrationalism and superstition that is increasingly prevalent in the television and print media. We have been instrumental in examining and reporting upon the Tarpon Springs "weeping icon," hypnosis, (in)famous psychics, local astrologers, etc.

TBS does not reject claims out of hand, but rather is committed to objective and critical inquiry. In this vein, we share the philosophy of the Committee for Skeptical Inquiry (CSI) -- publisher of Skeptical Inquirer magazine, an international organization that has nurtured the growth of local skeptics groups (such as ours) all over the world.

Membership in TBS

We encourage those who wish to help further the cause of skepticism to join TBS! You can take your first step, and make a statement about irrationality and superstition at the same time, by writing a check for $15 to cover your first year's dues. Annual membership includes four issues of Tampa Bay Skeptics Report, each snailmailed to you in advance of our quarterly meetings (last Saturday of every March, June, September, and December). Members also receive a 30% discount on any Prometheus Books purchased through TBS.

Make your $15 check payable to "Tampa Bay Skeptics" and mail to:

Practical Freethought

Thousands of your friends and neighbors in the Tampa Bay area feel the same as you. The Tampa Bay Coalition of Reason is a group of local organizations joined together to increase the growth, visibility and acceptance of nontheists throughout the area.

All of these groups share common ground, while each has its own particular emphasis and atmosphere. Some are focused on scientific inquiry and education. Others are focused on ethics and community, activism or the arts. Others monitor state/church separation and fight for your civil rights. All alike are committed to promoting the wider acceptance of a more rational and contemporary view of humanity and the universe we live in.

TampaBayCoR.org is where secular people in the Tampa Bay area can discover groups to join, activities in which to participate, events to attend and like-minded people with which to socialize. In short, we want to help those who have grown beyond religious belief to find their philosophical home.

Those nonbelievers who are not ready, or who are unable, to “come out” can take comfort in knowing that they are not the only ones who accept the reality of a 100% natural world.

For the religious community, we want them to realize that, although non-theists reject the supernatural, we share with them compassionate human values that most religious believers embrace. In most ways, we are like them; hard working, taxpaying, moral citizens who care deeply about our families, our communities, our state and our country.

Non-theists are a large minority, larger than many minorities having much more political and cultural influence than we do. Based on the US Census Bureau estimate of Florida’s 2008 population and several polls, we estimate our statewide constituency at about 2,800,000 residents (more than 400,000 in the Tampa Bay quad-county area). TampaBayCoR has organized to increase our standing in the marketplace of ideas and to take our rightful place at the table of acceptance and equal rights. We invite all nontheists to support us in our efforts by joining and actively participating in one of TBCoR’s constituent groups.

Even if you never join a group or attend a meeting you can help Florida move forward by contributing to local or national participating organizations. And you can always help to further the nontheistic community just by standing up proudly for your reality-based life among your friends and family. It’s OK to not believe in gods. And, yes—not only can you be good without a god or religion, but in most cases, far better off. Millions of us are. R.O.
