Evolve!

This is the imperative of our age as it is of every age. It is not of course, a slow physical evolution that drives us, but social, intellectual, political, and economic Transformations. It is not our bodies, but our restive and dynamic humanness that must grow.

Recent events once again drives us to notice that, though at times change may seem glacial, and that stability is our goal, the pent up energies of our culture often find a sudden and unexpected release.

DOMA is overthrown, but at the same time the voting Rights Act of 1965 is compromised. In that same week, the president sets forth a most urgent call for the congress to act against the threat of global warming even as powerful, profit driven, economic forces continue to campaign against regulations to constrain what is truly an existential threat to all humanity.

But beyond the questions of the moment, are trends and channels of the longer term. We are slowly coming to realize and appreciate the advantages conferred upon us by our ancient disposition toward the interwoven strands of connectedness that drive us to a cohesive community. The growth of world population in a strained environment demands cooperation and tolerance as the price of survival. Advocates of critical thinking and full education must lead the way. It is our self chosen obligation, as is always the case of those who lead the parade, to choose the route.

Many of us do not fully realize or appreciate the burden we have put upon ourselves just by being who we are. But to champion the cause of a life without delusion is to actively become an ombudsman for the greater good of our species.

In practical terms, this means we must attend to education and spend a little time at the school board to make sure that science is not diluted or negated by nonsensical religious mythologies.

It means that history, social science and the humanities must not become the victims of budget cuts. Literature, music, and art inform our personal version of humanity in essential ways.

We must speak up for and support; symphony orchestras, playhouses, poetry slams, eloquent writing in every form, physical and performance art, and the examination of serious questions.

But by far, we must support the growth and opportunity for friendship that unifies the people, gives us all purpose, and a common foundation. Steven Pinker shows the motion of history is toward a homeostasis of lesser violence, (daily news notwithstanding). Though our present economy seemingly works hard to erode it, trust becomes the new currency.

Even as the nuclear family loses its centrality, new forms of social integration and dependency are taking its place. Ours is a time of many new threads of technological and social change coming to the fore, each offering differing paths to an unknown future; we must find the ones most likely to be compatible with a truly human existence.

Volume 21 No. 7 July, 2013

Global warming is real, so it follows that what we need now is not a presentation about combating critics (also called "denialists") or delving into science minutia. Instead, this is a whirlwind tour of climate change now, touching on its history, coming consequences, political obstacles and possible solutions. We see what effects are being experienced now, and what scientists calculate the future will hold for the average American, and the average human being. Proposed solutions are shown to be sometime practical, sometimes inadequate, and often just batsh*t crazy.

Finally, our speaker makes a candid calculation of how he personally will need to change to make exactly a zero contribution to global warming. Following the presentation, the group is invited to contribute their own ideas during questions and answers.

Note ! Because of a problem with our usual meeting space, we will be on hiatus for the month of July. Or, if you need a humanist fix, see page 5 for an alternative. Stay tuned: We will resume pondering the venerable questions at our August meeting above. This will be among the most important matter we will discuss. Please attend.

September may be a washout also, but for the rest of the year, and through 2014 the venue is set.

Food: the first kindness. Humanists aspire to true friendship with our fellow human beings. An important measure of this concern is care for the physical well being of others. There is increasing hunger here in our community. Don't forget to bring canned and boxed food or checks for:

Humanists work to build a world in which happiness is the enduring criterion of social policy.

What is the Humanist Way?

1. To extend a human centered approach to the critical problems of life and society.
2. To encourage attitudes of kindness, compassion, tolerance and a loving generosity in human relationships, and in our treatment of all life. These attitudes help us to see ourselves in the lives of others and encourage appreciation for the remarkable diversity of human culture and experience.
3. To develop and popularize the skills of creative and critical thinking that empower people to challenge prejudice, superstition and irrationality in every area of life. Such empowerment enables the individual to reach the highest levels of achievement.
4. To exalt those artistic and imaginative expressions of life which have been the source of the greatest pleasure and enlightenment, and which reflect compelling human truths. Through music, literature, art, dance, and other expressions, we embrace the essence of what it means to be human.
5. To explore the grounds of ethics and morality within the unfolding history of our evolving culture. Such knowledge will enable us to become effective protagonists for the happiness of the individual person. JP

The Kochhar Humanist Education Center hopes to impact the level of community activism among chapters and affiliates of the American Humanist Association by providing case studies and citizen action guides; they bring to light issues on minority religions and ethnicities that humanist chapter members may not have considered before. It will also expand existing efforts like Essays in the Philosophy of Humanism and utilize other resources in working to eliminate the pernicious effects of ignorance and discrimination.

Our topic:

The problem of Evil

This is one of the most difficult contradictions for theologians to grapple. The argument states simply that God, the creator of the universe and all its properties, has certain necessary attributes. Among them is omniscience (all knowing), omnipotence (all Powerful), beneficence (all good.) A severe contradiction arises in attempting to reconcile the presence of evil, which may be defined as events and conditions that causes pain and suffering to sentient beings in the universe, with any kind of deity in the traditional normative sense as defined above.

How does our world view shift in consequence of this? How do we account for evil? What can we do about it? Join us for an interesting discussion.

The Tampa Humanist Association is the only AHA Humanist group in Hillsborough County. This is a county of more than 1 million people. If statistical averages are correct, than at least 150,000 of those people do not support conventional institutions of religion. Currently, our roles do not number more than 20. I think we can agree that there is room for growth.

We experienced a major setback with the death of president and cofounder Rob Byrch, but with still enthusiastic members and board, and support from our sister organization, the Humanist Society of the Suncoast, we continue to offer the people of Tampa, a local Humanist option.

A Humanist Helping Hand

Several members have formed a caring response team to help members of our Humanist family who may need supportive practical help. This is an independent group, not affiliated directly with the Humanist Society. But their efforts are wholly consistent with the Humanist outlook. FLORIDA REPORT

Civil liberties news in the Sunshine State

Dear ACLU Supporter,

Hi, my name is Jesus Guevara, and I am 13 years old and in 6th grade. I am a U.S. citizen and my brother and sisters are too-but our father is undocumented. I love my father and I want him to stay here in the U.S. with us, but I am scared that he will be deported. This Father's Day, I write on behalf of my family and all of the other families who are living in fear of their fathers being deported and taken away from them.

This Father's Day tell your Senator to keep families like mine together by supporting immigration reform that creates a system with a fair roadmap to citizenship!

My family is a Mexican-American family. The U.S. is our home and we love this country. My father has been here for more than 20 years, and has worked hard to provide for us. Thanks to his hard work we own a house. Like many families across the country, this Father's Day we are throwing a big party for my dad, to show him how much we love him. I worked very hard to buy a nice present for him. He has given me so much. He risks being stopped by the police just to take me to school or to be there any time I receive an award or have a special event at school.

Tell Senator Rubio to help our family, and families like mine, by supporting a roadmap to citizenship in immigration reform.

It is very hard for me to live with the fear that I might not be able to see my father again. I've never been in Mexico, and I don't want my father to go there. In the next couple of years, I want to learn how to drive, and to graduate from high school. I know that if my father is here with me I can achieve big things. Every night before going to sleep, I pray for my family and for all the families in this country that this is not the last day I spend with my dad.

Florida Now

<http://www.flnow.org/>

NOW is a multi-issue political organization. NOW's self-defined role has been to initiate change for the benefit of the greatest number of people, to affect the legal and institutional structures of the society in a way that systematically expands the choices and possibilities available to all women. In this way, NOW takes action to bring women, as a class, into the mainstream of society, rather than offering aid to individual women in achieving personal solutions or temporary relief from oppression.

For several years now, various leaders of the Freethought community in the bay area have been meeting informally to share experiences, and occasionally to coordinate plans. But recently, changing circumstances have brought additional pressure to cooperate in bringing programs and members services to an expanding movement.

At this point leaders continue to meet, and together with the various boards of directors and committees, try to develop policies that will enable every group to enhance its unique role in serving its members.

There appears to be general agreement on developing several community wide programs over the year that will allow significant speakers to be presented in our area. The costs of these programs will be shared among the organizations proportionally.

Thus substantive and exciting new activities will be offered to the Tampa Bay area that were not possible for most organizations before.

We are especially grateful to the national office of the United Coalition of Reason and its director, Fred Edwards. You may recall that UCoR was the major impetus to getting a large number of billboards erected across the nation with such messages as "You can be good without God. Millions are!"

TBCoR is an alliance of groups identified with the freethought / Humanist /Atheist movement.

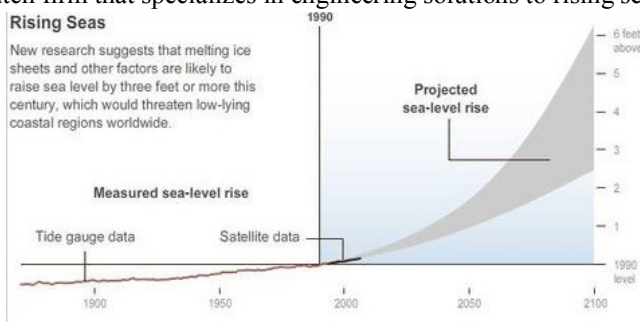

As this momentum continues to grow, we will keep you informed of developments. JP

Scientist: 'Miami, As We Know It Today, Is Doomed.'

It's Not A Question Of If. It's A Question Of When.'

South Florida has two big problems. The first is its remarkably flat topography. Half the area that surrounds Miami is less than five feet above sea level. Its highest natural elevation, a limestone ridge that runs from Palm Beach to just south of the city, averages a scant 12 feet. With just three feet of sea-level rise, more than a third of southern Florida will vanish; at six feet, more than half will be gone; if the seas rise 12 feet, South Florida will be little more than an isolated archipelago surrounded by abandoned buildings and crumbling overpasses. And the waters won't just come in from the east – because the region is so flat, rising seas will come in nearly as fast from the west too, through the Everglades. Even worse, South Florida sits above a vast and porous limestone plateau. "Imagine Swiss cheese, and you'll have a pretty good idea what the rock under southern Florida looks like," says Glenn Landers, a senior engineer at the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers. This means water moves around easily – it seeps into yards at high tide, bubbles up on golf courses, flows through underground caverns, corrodes building foundations from below. "Conventional sea walls and barriers are not effective here," says Robert Daoust, an ecologist at a Dutch firm that specializes in engineering solutions to rising seas.

Nobody Dies in the Spring

Nobody dies in the spring
on the Upper West Side:
nobody dies.

On the Upper West Side

we're holding hands with strangers on the Number 5 bus, and we're singing the sweet graffiti on the subway, and kids are skipping patterns through the bright haze of incinerators, and beagles and poodles are making a happy ruin of the sidewalks, and hot-dog men are racing their pushcarts down Riverside Drive, and Con Ed is tearing up Broadway from Times Square to the Bronx, and the world is a morning miracle of sirens and horns and jackhammers and Baskin-Robbins' 31 kinds of litter and sausages at Zabar's floating overhead like blimps--oh, it is no place for dying, not on the Upper West Side, in springtime.

There will be a time for the smell of burning leaves at Barnard, for milkweed winging silky over Grant's Tomb,
for apples falling to grass in Needle Park;
but not in all this fresh new golden smog: now there is something breaking loose in people's chests, something that makes butchers and bus boys and our neighborhood narcs and muggers go whistling in the streets--now there is something with goat feet out there, not waiting for the WALK light, piping life into West End window-boxes, pollinating weeds around condemned residential hotels, and prancing along at the head of every elbowing crowd on the West Side, singing:

Follow me-- it's spring-- and nobody dies.

Humanist Families of Greater Tampa

Jennifer Hancock started this organization several years ago. It uniquely serves Humanist families with a variety of wonderful programs throughout the year.

There is a strong emphasis on creative childrearing. Here, you can make connection with other families dealing with the problems of living in a society that is still hostile to an explicitly Humanist Way of life.

Jennifer is author of several books including; The Humanist Handbook, The Humanist Approach to Happiness, and her latest book, The Bully Vaccine (illustration below). - JP

Humanist Families organizes social outings every month. These are opportunities to do something fun, socialize and enjoy each other's company. Sometimes we go to a park, sometimes a museum, sometimes we go swimming. Our group has grown over the past year to the point we now organize Tampa area outings and Manatee/Sarasota area outings every month.

Throughout the year we host parties like Darwin Day in February, World Humanist Day in June, Freethought Day at Disney in October and Carl Sagan Day in November.

Among our spin off groups, is a Parenting Beyond Belief group which gets together to discuss the challenges of raising children without religion. We are on Facebook at: <http://www.facebook.com/groups/HumanistFamiliesTampa/>

Today's topic is:

What's Holding Humanism Back?

I spoke at the American Humanist Conference a couple of weeks ago. It was a fun time and I met lots of lovely people. I spoke at a pre-conference session on How to promote Humanism beyond the choir.

For those of you who receive this mailing, much of what I spoke about isn't news to you. There are a lot of opportunities to talk to the general public about Humanism.

We can talk about values, dignity, worth of humans, a host of civil and human rights issues. We can also engage and discuss Humanism in medicine, psychology, nursing, sociology and business.

In fact, there are so many ways to introduce the value of Humanism to people that I truly don't understand why we don't engage in these opportunities more.

I'm not the only one who feels this way. James Croft, who is with the Humanist Chaplaincy at Harvard recently posted on his blog - 3 things holding Humanism back - see: <http://www.patheos.com/blogs/templeofthefuture/2013/03/three-things-holding-humanism-back/>

It's worth reading. I'm not going to repeat his arguments here. Suffice it to say, I agree with him.

One of the main problems I think we have is that we are afraid. We are afraid to label ourselves Humanists and to share our values with others because we, rightly, don't want to proselytize. We are afraid of falling prey to group think that we refuse to create true communities that can nurture us and support us in our values and aspirations as Humanists. If we, as Humanists are too afraid to talk to others about Humanism, we should not be surprised if we continue to be sidelined within not only the larger freethought community, but also within society at large.

We need to stop being afraid and start taking the responsibility to share our Humanism with others.

While acknowledging that there still exist "deniers," President Obama noted that 97 percent of scientists now agree the climate is changing, and that human activity is primarily responsible through the release of greenhouse gasses. He added that this near consensus now includes a number of scientists who were former skeptics, and that global temperatures have reached record highs in 12 of the last 15 years, emphasizing that the process responsible - the greenhouse effect - is well understood by science. He further noted that many destructive events can now be attributed partly to climate change, even if we cannot blame each individual event on the process. The close correlation of increasing carbon dioxide in the atmosphere with rising global temperatures and increasingly destructive hurricanes, tornadoes, fires, droughts, coastal storm surges and sea-level rise is well confirmed by climate science, both from observations and global climate modeling.

The president emphasized that we have an imperative to act to both modify those activities that are driving climate change and also to pursue new scientific advances and new technologies that will lead us into a healthier energy future. He provided statistics to show that wind and solar power are rapidly increasing their fraction of the energy we produce, even if that fraction remains small, and that by adding nuclear power -- and, especially for the mid-term, natural gas as major and cleaner energy sources -- we can continue to reduce our dependence on fossil fuel sources that are the major sources of carbon dioxide in the atmosphere today. He reviewed former legislative accomplishments and presidential directives already being implemented, including some of his own, emphasizing that Republican presidents had contributed to proposing and supporting many of them in days when the country could expect more compromise than recent political wars seem to allow. He called his plan a New National Climate Action Plan, and in light of current political conditions, made it clear that his administration could and would implement much of it independent of Congressional inaction on climate change. The president also emphasized the global nature of this challenge, requiring that the United States play a leading role while also cooperating with other nations to achieve solutions.

The moral tone of President Obama's speech was evident through out. He clearly deplored a spirit of inaction or business as usual in many of his remarks. He noted that American science, technology and industry have already made major advances in reducing atmospheric carbon dioxide and other forms of pollution, operating more in a spirit of forward looking can do than backward looking don't change anything. He constantly referred to our current responsibilities to those who follow us, remarks that invariably drew cheers from his young audience. Yet his remarks were generally balanced and realistic. On the controversial issue of the Keystone pipeline, the president made clear the criterion on which his decision will be based. It will be determined by the impact on climate change. It is hard to disagree with that criterion on anything affecting climate change, an issue that may be approaching criticality.

Announcing a new opportunity for your atheist, freethought, humanist, secular, or skeptic group

BECOME PART OF THE CFI NETWORK

The Center for Inquiry has a broad mandate to promote and defend science, reason, and secular values. The CFI tent is big, so the CFI Network links together new and existing independent groups of many varieties—atheists, freethinkers, humanists, secularists, and skeptics—in order to maximize cultural and political impact.

The CFI Network is also a way for us to share the benefits of our international leadership and structure with local groups, while allowing those groups to remain independent and true to their individual interests. At the same time, it creates an opportunity for local groups to coalesce their grassroots energy and efforts behind national and even international campaigns.

The CFI Network is open to local and independent groups from anywhere. There is no fee to become part of the CFI Network, and it's easy to apply. To begin, read the program details below and discuss them with your group's leadership and members. If the CFI Network program aligns with the mission and purpose of your group, submit your information via this link to start the application process.

Whether the focus has been atheism, freethought, humanism, secularism, or skepticism, local groups and large national nonprofit organizations have worked for decades to bring people together to unite behind their specific causes. After all, we realize that if we are to make an impact on our cultural and political landscapes, we need to combine the voices—and organize the efforts!—of thousands and thousands of people.

Historically, organizing the work of so many different people and groups has proven to be very difficult. As a result, our combined impact isn't actually combined—it's sectional, which of course means that it's not as powerful as it could be. As we all witness every day, it's certainly not as powerful as it needs to be.

There must be a system that can bring together all the members of the "reality-based" community. Whether we identify as atheists, freethinkers, humanists, secularists, or skeptics, we all share basic values rooted in inquiry, naturalism, and the scientific method—values that urgently need to be demonstrated and advanced in the broader culture.

There must be a system that can unite all of our voices when success requires our voice to be strong.

Benefits for CFI Network groups include:

Association with an internationally recognized organization and brand, an association that provides the opportunity to expand your group's reputation and influence at the local level, in the broader movement, and, importantly, beyond the movement.

Access to the comprehensive CFI Outreach Grassroots Organizing Guide, with over 150 pages of helpful tips and tricks about local group organizing. The guide also includes dozens of sample event signs and advertisements, press releases, and volunteer organizing materials. It will be updated on a regular basis.

Access to new CFI Event Kits produced every quarter to help groups celebrate some of the most important occasions in the atheist/humanist/skeptic calendar, including Carl Sagan Day, Darwin Day, International Blasphemy Rights Day, and Ten Amendments Day. Event Kits will also give instructions on how to host major events such as solstice parties, superstition bashes, "Ask an Atheist" panels, and Ingersoll oratory contests. Event kits include posters/flyers that can be customized with a group's event details, sample press releases, educational materials and background information for each event, suggested activities, basic logos and imagery for promotional items, etc. CFI Network groups may also purchase event-themed products from CFI (available at cost), which they can then sell to raise funds to support their groups.

Improved outreach: in addition to listing CFI Network groups and contact information on its website, CFI will promote to its contacts any major regional events hosted by CFI Network groups.

Improved advocacy: by working with CFI headquarters, CFI Network groups will be able to utilize CFI's online advocacy platform to lead regional public policy and awareness campaigns—for example lobbying a local school board to adopt an evidence-based science curriculum or petitioning a governor to remove a Ten Commandments monument from the statehouse. Members of CFI Network groups will also be activated to participate in CFI's broader public policy initiatives, making it possible for them to impact national policy and even international issues via CFI's NGO status at the United Nations.

Educational resources, including complimentary copies of CFI's publications/magazines and related discussion guides, mission-related brochures, and sample reading materials.

In exchange for the above benefits—indeed, in order to get the most out of these benefits—groups in the CFI Network are expected to: Clearly acknowledge the group's participation in the CFI Network, both in event promotion and activism and if/when local media is involved. For example, groups should include the CFI Network logo on certain promotional materials and on their websites or, when giving the group's name, spokespersons should add the suffix, "part of the CFI Network" when appropriate. (E.g.: "Carl Sagan Day is sponsored by Freethought Arizona, part of the CFI Network.")

Encourage local group members to become members of CFI. Encourage local group members to sign up to receive email notices about CFI news and events and to participate in CFI activism campaigns. If your local group would like to increase its regional effectiveness while also contributing to national and international efforts promoting science, reason, and secular values, please consider becoming part of the CFI Network. Beyond the soap and water

For over 70 years 1922 to 96, the young women of Ireland were subject to the iron law of the church. Any woman or girl found committing sin (or thinking about it) was subject to being sent to the so called Magdalene Laundries, a species of prison or reform school, there to clean laundry from the churches' many institutions and commercial enterprises, unpaid of course, and subject to extremely strict supervision, sometimes for many years. Some died in consequence.

The Irish government is now partially compensating the victims with a payment fund of $45 million dollars, and state emolliements of many kinds. For its part in this, and many other tragedies inflicted on the Irish people, the catholic church stands in shame and condemnation around the world. More...

Kovachevich Court undermines the Affordable Healthcare Plan

The US district court of Elizabeth Kovakovich ruled recently that a Largo business could rightfully claim an exemption from having to participate in the plan on the basis that its contraception provisions violated his religious freedom rights. This finding was predicated on the finding that corporations have first amendment religious freedom. Should this ruling be upheld it will create considerable problems as corporate religions will blossom everywhere with religious exemptions to coverage for all kinds of worker's rights. More...

Practical Freethought

Thousands of your friends and neighbors in the Tampa Bay area feel the same as you. The Tampa Bay Coalition of Reason is a group of local organizations joined together to increase the growth, visibility and acceptance of nontheists throughout the area.

All of these groups share common ground, while each has its own particular emphasis and atmosphere. Some are focused on scientific inquiry and education. Others are focused on ethics and community, activism or the arts. Others monitor state/church separation and fight for your civil rights. All alike are committed to promoting the wider acceptance of a more rational and contemporary view of humanity and the universe we live in.

TampaBayCoR.org is where secular people in the Tampa Bay area can discover groups to join, activities in which to participate, events to attend and like-minded people with which to socialize. In short, we want to help those who have grown beyond religious belief to find their philosophical home.

Those nonbelievers who are not ready, or who are unable, to “come out” can take comfort in knowing that they are not the only ones who accept the reality of a 100% natural world.

For the religious community, we want them to realize that, although non-theists reject the supernatural, we share with them compassionate human values that most religious believers embrace. In most ways, we are like them; hard working, taxpaying, moral citizens who care deeply about our families, our communities, our state and our country.

Non-theists are a large minority, larger than many minorities having much more political and cultural influence than we do. Based on the US Census Bureau estimate of Florida’s 2008 population and several polls, we estimate our statewide constituency at about 2,800,000 residents (more than 400,000 in the Tampa Bay quad-county area). TampaBayCoR has organized to increase our standing in the marketplace of ideas and to take our rightful place at the table of acceptance and equal rights. We invite all nontheists to support us in our efforts by joining and actively participating in one of TBCoR’s constituent groups.

Even if you never join a group or attend a meeting you can help Florida move forward by contributing to local or national participating organizations. And you can always help to further the nontheistic community just by standing up proudly for your reality-based life among your friends and family. It’s OK to not believe in gods. And, yes—not only can you be good without a god or religion, but in most cases, far better off. Millions of us are.
