Coming for Darwin Day, next February:

The Evolution of Human Happiness

The Board of Tampa Bay Coalition of Reason is pleased to announce the theme for our 2018 annual celebration of science, secularism, and human progress. We have been negotiating with some of the leading researchers and authors in this field and are highly encouraged to report we are very excited about the talent we will bring to this event. And you will be too. Forthcoming editions of this newsletter will have important details on what you can expect.

National Pride and Human Solidarity

As we approach our national holiday, it is time to consider the meaning of our country. Our short history encompasses the greatest material prosperity ever visited on humankind, the rise of democracy and equality, the test of reason, and the great disappointment with the tenacity of ignorance and mendacity.

Through it all, we cling to our history, and the rule of law, no matter how unreasonable. We persist as our best minds and stoutest hearts have persisted. In the face of war and depression, and the corrosive temptations of apparently easy wealth and easier corruption, we have kept a tinder of hope - the recognition of our common humanity - alive in the chaos of our political rivalries. Still, we struggle to define ourselves, and in that struggle resides the America we seek.

JP

Charles Darwin was not only a great scientific thinker. He was fascinated by the relationship between human beings and other animals. He foresaw the false ideological evils for which natural selection might be used in justification and warned against such misunderstanding. He was also sensitive to the private and social upheaval that the theory of evolution would cause: revealing that human beings all belong to one common family and relating us to all other living things came at the cost of displacing humanity from the central, divine position we had previously occupied. Despite his personal caution, Darwinism radically re-shaped our intuitions about all living things, and today humanists all over the world can celebrate a defining moment in the naturalization of our understanding of the world. It can well be said that the general principle of evolution applies across the spectrum of natural phenomena including all aspects of human life. Since Happiness is a prime mover of human action, we will attempt to enlarge our understanding of it in February of 2018. Please plan to join us then. More details will be announced shortly.

Catastrophic Anthropogenic Global Warming (CAGW), more frequently called "Climate Change," is accompanied by dire predictions of imminent calamity. Sea level rise of 10 to 30 feet and more by the year 2100. An atmosphere more in line with the planet Venus. Increased droughts, floods, hurricanes and tornadoes. And our children will grow up not having seen snow. HG

Howard Gray will discuss the current support of CAGW as predictions of calamity fail to be realized.

Ed. Note: Howard will present the kind of propositions we do not usually entertain, but which are very useful to consider if we want to fully understand what is happening to our country and the world. It is not necessary to have a science degree to follow Howard's carefully wrought claims. As in all cases with our guests who are advocates for a certain view, we will pay polite but critical attention, and will be enriched by the experience.

We are pleased to have Howard offer a contrarian point of view on a subject that has interested us for some time.

The society is A sponsor of the Tampa Bay Post Carbon Council project. See page 5.

Humanists work to build a world in which happiness is the enduring criterion of all policy.

What is the Humanist Way?

1. To extend a human centered approach to the critical problems of life & society.
2. To encourage attitudes of kindness, compassion, tolerance & a loving generosity in human relationships, & in our treatment of all life. These attitudes help us to see ourselves in the lives of others, & encourage appreciation for the remarkable diversity of human culture & experience.
3. To develop & popularize the skills of creative & critical thinking that empower people to challenge prejudice, superstition & irrationality in every area of life. Such empowerment enables the individual to reach the highest levels of achievement.
4. To exalt those artistic & imaginative expressions of life which have been the source of the greatest pleasure & enlightenment, & which reflect compelling human truths. Through music, literature, art, dance, & other expressions, we embrace the essence of what it means to be human.
5. To explore the grounds of ethics & morality within the unfolding history of our evolving culture. Such knowledge will enable us to become effective protagonists for the happiness of the individual person. JP

Laugh Lines What the Doctors think 07-17

The medical community is unable to reach consensus on what to do with America's health insurance situation. Here then is Health Care from the Doctor's Perspective.

Allergists were in favor of scratching it, but the Dermatologists advised not to make any rash moves.

The Gastroenterologists had sort of a gut feeling about it, but the Neurologists thought the Administration had a lot of nerve.

Meanwhile, Obstetricians felt certain everyone was laboring under a misconception, while the Ophthalmologists considered the idea shortsighted.

Pathologists yelled, "Over my dead body!" while the Pediatricians said, "Oh, grow up!"

The Psychiatrists thought the whole idea was madness, while the Radiologists could see right through it.

Surgeons decided to wash their hands of the whole thing and the Internists claimed it would indeed be a bitter pill to swallow.

The Plastic Surgeons opined that this proposal would "put a whole new face on the matter."

The Podiatrists thought it was a step forward, but the Urologists were pissed off at the whole idea.

Anesthesiologists thought the whole idea was a gas, and those lofty Cardiologists didn't have the heart to say no.

In the end, the Proctologists won out, leaving the entire decision up to the anuses in Washington.

Discussion Leader: Lucas Hopegood

As Humanists it is our task to discover the secret world above & within the level of conscious recognition. Using the instruments of reason, & critical thinking, we strive to be at one in understanding both the world that made us, & the one we are inventing.

Each month a new investigation thoughtfully & critically dissects a new intersection of mind & matter. Be part of it.

At present, we are a small, intimate group meeting in a neighborhood library. But we are ambitious, and hope to grow. Ideally, such small discussion groups should appear in every neighborhood. The need is as great as the potential. What is required is a few longtime humanists willing to take on the relatively small effort to secure a library meeting room once a month, post a few notices here and there (including this newsletter), and show up to lead a discussion, share a little knowledge; give something to the future.

As Issac Asimov, our former president, is quoted as saying, "Since you can't take it with you, send it on ahead." Humanism is as much in need of good followership as it is of effective leadership. Now is the time to do your part in either category. We can help.

Humanist Psychology

Humanistic, humanism and humanist are terms in psychology relating to an approach which studies the whole person, and the uniqueness of each individual. Essentially, these terms refer the same approach in psychology.

Humanism is a psychological perspective that emphasizes the study of the whole person. Humanistic psychologists look at human behavior not only through the eyes of the observer, but through the eyes of the person doing the behaving.

Sometimes the humanistic approach is called phenomenological. This means that personality is studied from the point of view of the individual's subjective experience. For Rogers the focus of psychology is not behaviour (Skinner), the unconscious (Freud), thinking (Wundt) or the human brain but how individuals perceive and interpret events. Rogers is therefore important because he redirected psychology towards the study of the self.

The humanistic approach in psychology developed as a rebellion against what some psychologists saw as the limitations of the behaviorist and psychodynamic psychology. The humanistic approach is thus often called the "third force" in psychology after psychoanalysis and behaviorism (Maslow, 1968).

Humanistic psychology begins with the existential assumptions that phenomenology is central and that people have free will. Personal agency is the humanistic term for the exercise of free will. Personal agency refers to the choices we make in life, the paths we go down and their consequences.

Pensacola Monument makes Humanists Cross

The American Humanist Association's (AHA) Appignani Humanist Legal Center presented its arguments June 14th before the United States District Court for the Northern District of Florida, seeking summary judgment in a lawsuit aimed at preventing the continued state sponsorship of a religious monument.

The AHA in conjunction with the Freedom From Religion Foundation (FFRF) filed a lawsuit in 2015 on behalf of Pensacola residents who felt that a large cross, located in a city park and maintained by the city government, represented a troubling elevation of the Christian faith above other beliefs. The request for summary judgment, filed in April of this year, prompts the court to make a decision regarding whether the massive Christian display violates the Establishment clause of the First Amendment.

"Binding legal precedent requires the removal of the city's cross," said Monica Miller, Senior Counsel at the Appignani Humanist Legal Center. "Such an overt Christian monolith endorsed and displayed by the city is a clear violation of the Establishment Clause, and today we presented our arguments urging the court to respect all citizens' First Amendment rights."

Humanist Quotes

"It is wrong for a man to say that he is certain of the objective truth of any proposition unless he can produce evidence which logically justifies that certainty."

– T H Huxley, Agnosticism and Christianity, 1889

Change or Warming?

LONDON, June 22 (Thomson Reuters Foundation) - When it comes to climate speak, labels seem to matter: the American public - particularly Republicans - are more likely to say they doubt the existence of "global warming" than "climate change", according to researchers at Cornell University.

In a survey, 74 percent of Republicans polled said they believed that climate change is happening, but only 66 percent said they believed in global warming. In contrast, 94 percent of Democrats said they believed in both.

The reasons why people discredit climate science may be because they do not like the policies being proposed to tackle the problem, said study co-author Jonathon Schuldt, assistant professor of communication at Cornell.

"Acknowledging the reality of global warming or climate change may lead to new government regulations on businesses, which goes against core conservative values," he said.

"So, telling a pollster that the phenomenon isn't happening may reflect something about a person's general policy preferences, not just their level of certainty that the global climate is changing."

U.S. President Donald Trump's tweets are less likely to speak about climate change than global warming - which he has described as a hoax. In all, 106 of his tweets mentioned "global warming" and 36 said "climate change", the researchers found.

"Our results suggest that Trump's emphasis on 'global warming' may be an effective rhetorical strategy that resonates with his Republican constituents, who express more skepticism in response to that term in particular," said Schuldt.

But the chasm between Republicans and Democrats on climate science might not be as large as it seems, Schuldt added.

"If you ask people what they think about climate change - not global warming - we find that the partisan gap shrinks by about 30 percent," he said. "There's actually more agreement here than we think."

The effect identified by the researchers is especially relevant given Trump's decision to pull the United States out of the Paris climate agreement, said co-author Peter Enns, associate professor of government.

Trump's announcement on June 1 that he wished to renegotiate the terms of the landmark 195-nation climate deal was met with dismay by other countries who signed the agreement. Trump has said participating in the accord - which aims to limit global warming to well below 2 degrees Celsius above pre-industrial levels - would undermine the U.S. economy, wipe out jobs, weaken national sovereignty and put his country at a permanent disadvantage.

The Cornell University research was based on a national probability survey of 1,461 U.S. adults carried out in October last year, and published on Wednesday. The Victory of the Commons

A new world based on community and collaboration is closer than you think. We can steward resources together, in fact, millions of people are doing just that. And not just in the history books. This week, from Kingston, NY, author and activist David Bollier, Co Founder of the Commons Strategy Group, explains what it means to Think Like A Commoner. Then, two activists engaged in Commons projects right now, talk about two very distinct but complementary Commons strategies — one digital in Barcelona, the other rural, in Mozambique. Graça Samo is the director of the Global March of Women and Mayo Fuster is on the faculty of the Berkman Center for Internet and Society at Harvard University and a researcher at the Autonomous University of Barcelona, Autonomous University of Barcelona. The commons are no tragedy, say our guests, they're an opportunity to model ourselves on creativity and shared resources, instead of enclosure. See the video here.

Our local community of freethinkers, Center for Inquiry Tampa Bay, is an all-volunteer organization. Members work together to share our humanist comradery in fostering a better world for all people, not just the monetarily successful. Without volunteers, CFI Tampa Bay can do little. Without paying members, we can't afford to accomplish much in the way of socials, speakers, guest film-makers and authors, buying office supplies, etc. Showing up at civic engagements that further our life views is important, especially if our members wear something that says "CFI", such as pins, shirts, signs. Asking friends to our gatherings and to join CFI is valuable in growing our membership. Not being a member but enjoying the activities is a dubious expression of commitment, don't you agree?

The Fall season of 2nd Saturday programs, and special socials begins afresh in September. The Book Club, dinners and luncheons continue, as do cooperative activities with Tampa Bay Coalition of Reason and the Tampa Bay Technology Center. Announcements of our activities usually appear on our Meetup, so you should join it (free) and RSVP to let us know that you read the announcement; RSVPs let us know how many are expected to attend. That way we can obtain the right-sized venue and provide the supplies. Thanks,.

CFI's all new "Point of Inquiry" Podcast

is beginning a brand new chapter!*

We want to believe that climate change can be stopped, that humanity can summon the political will to take decisive and meaningful action to avert disaster. But the difficult reality is that even if we make our very best efforts to rein in greenhouse gas emissions, climate change is coming. The real question now is how bad are we going to allow it to get?

In Religion, Only A Minority Is Right

by J. H. Mckenna, Ph.D.

Polytheism spread over the planet several thousand years ago to produce a majority belief among humans. Almost everyone was a polytheist.

Polytheism lasted thousands of years unopposed by a late arriving monotheism. And then, tardy monotheism arrived.

And then several sects and denominations of monotheism arose. Then other new religions emerged. Then several thousand denominations and even newer religions appeared, so that, today, there is no uniformity in religion and no majority religious option at all. In religion, your view is inevitably a minority view.

Whoever you are and whatever your view, you are vastly outnumbered by all the other options combined. You are Protestant, but the vast majority of humanity is not. You are Catholic, the vast majority of humanity is not. You are Orthodox, the vast majority is not. You are Muslim, the vast majority is not. You are Hindu, the vast majority is not. You are Buddhist, the vast majority is not. You are Atheist, the vast majority is not. And on and on with many thousands of religious choices.

Such diversity (which is just a pretty word for ‘disagreement’) can only mean that a small minority has the correct view and the vast majority is wrong. That the vast majority is wrong is a very powerful proof that real obstacles exist to firm knowledge. Humanity has a mental defect that permits it to be fooled with fake knowledge about religion. Our brains didn’t evolve to easily recognize metaphysical truth. And so the vast majority of humans can be hoodwinked over the course of an entire lifetime and indeed over the span of millennia. Some ancient creeds that we label ‘dead religions’ flourished for thousands of years before they faded away. Do any of us for a moment think those dead religions imparted to their millions of devotees any true knowledge about the way things really are?

For People Who Love Science

By Sam Farooqui

Every now and then (read: at least once every week), I come across some self-professed pro-science denizen of the internet who wants to argue about something or other. Often, they like to cite studies in support of their arguments. On several occasions (to the point that I have lost count of exactly how many occasions), I’ve looked into the methodology of those studies and found that they did not conclusively prove whatever point they were cited to prove. In multiple cases, the studies actually suggested the opposite of whatever claim they had been cited in service of.

Yes, those people “love” science. I have some theories for why this happens so often. They involve presumption of authority and objectivity, lack of scrutiny, fetishism, and as always, media reporting and the systems that hinder accuracy therein.

Often, these people are simply enthusiastic about science insofar as it serves as an authority, which is plenty plausible motive for why they sometimes take a light hand to scrutiny. As someone currently weighing whether or not to enter a field in the social sciences where the methods used can be manipulated to fit desirability or grab headlines, I understand too well how easy it is to misrepresent facts and findings, even when it’s not being done on purpose. Social and evolutionary psychology are absolutely rife with issues like these.

That is why it’s important to demand significantly more intense scrutiny. That is why it’s important to not see science as an entity that stands alone from what we do with it, that we can use as some sort of a trump card, instead of what it actually is: a way to get to truth. That seems to be the common ground between a lot of pro-science people and people who are outright deniers. The difference seems to often just be that the former see science as an inherently (almost miraculously) objective monolithic authority and the latter see it as an inherently suspect monolithic authority.

RESISTING EXTREMISM IN AMERICA, ONE PHONE CALL AT A TIME.

Since its launch in mid-December 2016, Daily Action has exploded into a huge phenomenon, with over a quarter of a million subscribers. We make civic engagement easy and painless, with a single action every day—connecting citizens to their legislators with a quick swipe of their phones.

TO JOIN, text DAILY to 228466 (A-C-T-I-O-N)

We have been featured in the Washington Post, NBC News, Cosmopolitan, Huffington Post, Vogue (and Teen Vogue too!), Fast Company, and many other outlets. Our calls have directly contributed to the reversal of the GOP's decision to gut the Office of Congressional Ethics and the decision of Customs and Border protection to release the number of detainees it was holding under Trump's travel ban. We placed a record number of calls to oppose Trump's pick for Labor Secretary, who later withdrew his nomination, and even spurred the envy of Clarence Thomas' wife. We have started sending out local actions to subscribers in high-population states, and we've even launched a book club focused on civic activism.

To join, text the word DAILY to the number 228466 (A-C-T-I-O-N). Every morning, you'll receive a text that links you to your Senator, member of Congress, or other appropriate official. You can call when you're walking to the bus stop or brewing your coffee. With a tap of your finger, you can do your part to resist extremism in America.

(Thanks to Gary Thompson for this tip. ROK)

This book traces the history of Wilsonian international liberalism that promotes the safety of democracies and the avoidance of war. Wilson's vision was a strong basis for stability. Unfortunately, political leanings increasingly espoused the imposition of democracies on other nations, with no regard for their cultures. Bush II and Obama equally espoused a neo-Wilsonianism that abandoned Wilson's wise prescriptions, while now, with Trump, the concept of international cooperation and defense of the welfare of democracies have been abandoned. Can America abandon imperialism and isolationism? Can rationalism be restored to government?

A single voice ... Magnified gets results ~ Laura Moser: Activism one day at a time

The day after the election, Laura Moser, a writer, mother of two and an EDF member, just wanted to stay in bed. She felt scared and full of uncertainty about the world her kids would grow up in. "Did we just throw away our one chance to put the brakes on climate change?" she wondered.

In the weeks that followed, Moser managed her anxiety about the new administration by donating to organizations working to protect people and the planet.

"We're relying on nonprofits like EDF now more than ever," she said.

Still, she wanted to do more. So with the help of her husband's digital media company, she created Daily Action, a text message-based service that educates subscribers about important issues and makes contacting elected officials quick and easy. Daily Action (dailyaction.org) now has over 250,000 subscribers.

"Before I had kids, I used to volunteer a lot," said Moser. "Then I just got too busy. But this election has reminded me that taking care of my kids is bigger than packing lunches and getting them places on time: it's about fighting for a cleaner, safer future or them.

"It's up to us now," Moser added. "Find out what you're good at and do it. Or find out what no one is doing and do it. We all just need to do a little bit more than we have before."

Free inquiry entails recognition of civil liberties as integral to its pursuit, that is, a free press, freedom of communication, the right to organize opposition parties and to join voluntary associations, and freedom to cultivate and publish the fruits of scientific, philosophical, artistic, literary, moral and religious freedom. ~ Paul Kurtz, The Father of Modern Secular Humanism

“And, by the way, when Jesus announced that we should cut off body parts, he was telling others to harm themselves. There were entire monastic orders that castrated themselves because Jesus said in Matthew 19:12 that “he that is able to receive it, let him receive it.” Every year in the United States we read about one or two men who mutilate themselves in order to prove their obedience to Christ. Answering Vaccine Skeptics, SkepDoc's Corner, Harriet Hall, June 14, 2017

The anti-vaccine movement is full of conspiracy theorists who deny the evidence for the effectiveness of vaccines, call vaccines “poisons,” think doctors and manufacturers (in collusion with the government) only promote vaccines to boost their incomes, and blame vaccines for all manner of adverse events. These vaccine denialists must not be confused with vaccine skeptics, many of whom are intelligent, well-educated people who trust science but who have legitimate questions and concerns about one or more vaccine. Many of these concerns turn out to be myths promulgated by people who appear to be experts and who sound convincing but who are not reliable sources of information. It’s hard for laymen, and even for many doctors, to distinguish the trustworthy sources of information from the untrustworthy. Here are some short answers to some of the most common objections to vaccines. Read the article here.

Chiropractors: Pro and Con, SkepDoc's Corner, Harriet Hall, June 1, 2017

In a recent article in The New York Times, pediatrician Aaron Carroll asks us to rethink our biases against chiropractors when it comes to treating bad backs. He points out that lower back pain is a common problem that usually resolves over time, and that interventions that focus on relief of symptoms and allow the body to heal are ideal. He claims that spinal manipulation therapy (SMT) is as effective as medical therapies and as safe, if not safer.

There is a remarkable disconnect between compelling anecdotal evidence and controlled scientific studies. Chiropractors and patients are convinced that SMT works because they have seen it work. I have seen it work too. I watched a patient hobble painfully into the exam room, barely able to walk and complaining of excruciating pain. A few minutes later, after spinal manipulation by a physical therapist, he was standing tall, walking normally, and reporting complete relief of his pain. Yet when controlled scientific studies are done, they find little evidence of effectiveness. One study found that SMT was no more effective than giving the patient a pamphlet on back care. A Cochrane review found that SMT was no better than sham interventions. The most favorable systematic review found an improvement in pain, but only of about 10 points on a 100-point scale. So what’s going on here? Read the article here.

“We must find ways to convey the beauty and mystery of science to more people. It is for this reason that Stephen Jay Gould, Isaac Asimov, Carl Sagan, Edward O. Wilson and Jacob Bronowski are among my personal heroes. Turning their back on comfortable scientific studies addressed to their colleagues, they turned instead to the public and shared with us their celebration of the human spirit embodied in science and reason. To quote Raymo again (Skeptics and True Believers, p. 252), their motto was: “If there be a skeptical star I was born under it, yet I have lived all my days in complete astonishment.” That should be our motto as well.” ~ Terry A. Smiljanich, TBS

NEW ANSWERS TO OLD QUESTIONS

“As secularism becomes more prominent and self-confident, its spokesmen have more insistently argued that secularism should not be seen as an absence — as a lack of faith — but rather as a positive moral creed. Phil Zuckerman, a Pitzer College sociologist, makes this case as fluidly and pleasurably as anybody in his book, Living the Secular Life.”

— David Brooks, The New York Times

“Society Without God” offers a unique perspective on the active debate regarding the necessity of religion... By turning to one of the most secular societies in the world, Scandinavia, Phil Zuckerman offers an empirically grounded account of a successful society where people are happy and content and help their neighbors without believing in God. The book is fluently written and highly illuminating. It offers an accessible entry to important questions in the study of religion and secularism.”

WOMEN BEYOND BELIEF

Discovering Life without Religion

Edited by Karen L. Gust, PhD

Women have made great strides toward equal rights over the past hundred years, especially in the West. But when considering the ongoing fight over reproductive rights and equal pay—and the prevalence of sexual violence and domestic abuse—it is clear that a significant gap still exists. With scripture often cited as justification for the marginalization of women, it is time to acknowledge that one of the final barriers to full equality for women is religion. But religion's negative impact on women has been less studied and discussed. This book is a step toward changing that.

Let's travel back in time to September 1939. WW II had just begun in Europe. The Wizard of Oz captivated moviegoers' imaginations with its revolutionary cinematography, portraying mysterious lands where strange rules applied. At Princeton, another kind of magic was about to begin: a complete rethinking of time & reality, led by extraordinary physicists: John Wheeler & his student Richard Feynman. Their mission: rescue quantum physics from its mathematical contradictions & establish what are fundamental ingredients of the universe.

See AoF Meetup for details Website: <http://aof.ngo>

AoF is a comfortable & safe place in which to find rewarding new friendships, to discover hidden potentials, & make a positive contribution to your own humanity as well as that of others. We are pleased to offer legal assistance with church state separation issues as an important focus.

For many people, atheism represents the most focused & powerful criticism of the philosophical worldview with which most of us were raised. It is liberating for the same reason it attracts the enmity of those who are committed to the closed & changeless narrative of unexamined traditional beliefs. JP

Time for Atheist History Month?

Despite being written out of large parts of history, atheists thrived in the polytheistic societies of the ancient world – raising considerable doubts about whether humans really are “wired” for religion – a study suggests. atheism – which is typically seen as a modern phenomenon – was not just common in ancient Greece and pre-Christian Rome, but probably flourished more in those societies than in most civilizations since. So how do we teach our friends and neighbors about the long standing existence of atheists in the community? How do we educate the community that atheists are not “devils”?

Find out and discuss what we can do on Sunday, July 9, 2017 1:30 PM to 3:30 PM at Atheists of Florida Headquarters 5103 S West Shore Blvd, Tampa, Fl. For information see our comprehensive web site: <http://aof.ngo>

Ever wonder what Florida Freethought groups are doing?

Now you can easily know. Atheists of Florida have a new freethought Calendar:

<http://AtheistsOfFloridaInc.org/calendar/>

Be a Celebrant!

Do you like to help people celebrate milestones in their life? Do you want to help someone when they lose a friend or family member?

Consider becoming a celebrant. An atheist celebrant.

An Atheist Celebrant?

An Atheist celebrant officiates and assists with a secular or civil ceremony, such as a wedding, a service to welcome new family members, coming-of-age rituals, end of life services, etc. Celebrants work with people to create a secular experience intended to be uniquely personalized, deep and loving, based on the person's personal philosophy, and not the celebrant's. A celebrant may have suggestions on how to approach the occasion, and if appropriate, the venue and setting, music, and textual sharing's.

Why do we have rituals?

According to The Journal of Cultural Anthropology (https://culanth.org/curated_collections/4-ritual)

"Ritual is arguably a universal feature of human social existence: just as one cannot envision a society without language or exchange, one would be equally hard-pressed to imagine a society without ritual. And while the word "ritual" commonly brings to mind exoticized images of primitive others diligently engaged in mystical activities, one can find rituals, both sacred and secular, throughout "modern" society:...."

According to the UNESCO webpage "Social practices, rituals and festive events" (<https://ich.unesco.org/en/social-practices-rituals-and-00055>):

Rituals "... are significant because they reaffirm the identity of those who practice them as a group or a society and, whether performed in public or private, are closely linked to important events...."

Humanist Families of Greater Tampa

Jennifer Hancock started this organization several years ago. It uniquely serves Humanist families with a variety of wonderful programs throughout the year. There is a strong emphasis on creative childrearing. Here, you can make connection with other families dealing with the problems of living in a society that is still hostile to an explicitly Humanist Way of life. Jennifer is author of several books including: The Humanist Handbook, The Humanist Approach to Happiness, & her latest book, The Bully Vaccine.

Humanist Families organizes social outings every month. These are opportunities to do something fun, socialize & enjoy each other's company. Sometimes we go to a park, sometimes a museum, sometimes we go swimming. Our group has grown over the past year to the point we now organize Tampa area outings & Manatee/Sarasota area outings every month.

Throughout the year we host parties like Darwin Day in February, World Humanist Day in June, Freethought Day at Disney in October & Carl Sagan Day in November. Among our spin off groups, is a Parenting Beyond Belief group which gets together to discuss the challenges of raising children without religion. We are on Facebook.

ACLU of Greater Tampa Bay

In the wake of the 2016 outbreak of toxic algae in the St. Lucie River and Estuary and along Florida's Treasure Coast, the ACLU of Florida was asked by members in the region and several environmental organizations to investigate the state's record of transparency with regard to the dissemination of information about the potential grave danger to the public health posed by the algae flow. Specific concern was expressed about the state's performance in delivering needed information evenly to all citizens in affected areas, and whether the state understate scientific evidence of dangers to public health.

The following report was researched with the help of local residents, scientists, media sources, and those state employees who cooperated with an ACLU of Florida investigator.

It is a gross mischaracterization of the wide latitude of freedoms that houses of worship enjoy in the United States to claim that their rights of free speech are being abrogated by the Johnson Amendment. These claims mask the more sinister intentions to channel money directly into political campaigns to influence elections. In 2016, Rev. Jerry Falwell, Jr. was quoted in the New York Times saying that repealing the Johnson Amendment would “create a huge revolution for conservative Christians and for free speech.” It is simply false to claim that churches and other houses of worship cannot engage in political speech or that pastors as individuals are unfairly fettered. Houses of worship can engage in political speech, and clergy are free to speak their mind in their personal capacity. The limit on 501(c)(3) organizations, including houses of worship, pertains only to abstaining from endorsing or opposing candidates in political campaigns. More

TAMPA BAY COALITION OF REASON

Promoting Action & Unity in the Tampa Bay Area

Join the Freethought Organizations of the Tampa Bay Area: groups that promote serious secular discussion & activity about important issues in our area & beyond.

Substantive & exciting new activities are now offered to the Tampa Bay area that were not possible for most organizations before.

Every year we sponsor events as Darwin Day in February, Solstice day in December, and other activities all year long.

We are especially grateful to the national office of the United Coalition of Reason & its director, Jason Heap.

You may recall that UCoR was the major impetus to getting a large number of billboards erected in Tampa Bay & across the nation with such messages as "You can be good without God. Millions are!"

TBCoR is an alliance of groups identified with the secular / freethought / Humanist / Atheist movement.

As this momentum continues to grow, we will keep you informed of developments .

François Arago, the first to show in 1810 that the surface of the Sun and stars is made of incandescent gas and not solid or liquid, was a prominent physicist of the 19th century. He used his considerable influence to help Fresnel, Ampere and others develop their ideas and make themselves known.

He made many personal contributions to physics, astronomy, geodesy and oceanography, Arago was also an important and influential political man who, for example, abolished slavery in the French colonies. As a humanist, he had very broad cultural interests on a wide range of subjects.

Humanistic studies is a multi-disciplinary human science for which humanist values are a source of inspiration. It combines insights gained from philosophy, psychology, sociology, religious and cultural sciences, theory of science and methodology.

Humanistic Studies explores how people respond to existential issues. What makes life worth living? What is the meaning of happiness and prosperity? Which moral and ethical choices are open to us? How do we cope with suffering and sorrow?

Humanistic Studies furthermore explores important contemporary social, political and ethical issues. What does a pluralist society entail? How can we define quality of care and education? How can we pursue sustainable development? How can human rights be guaranteed?

Assistance for homeless people.

Your help is sought for a new project in which all freethought organizations can contribute to relieve a particularly important need for homeless people; the necessity for personal cleansing and oral hygiene products. Almost everyone who goes for tooth cleaning receives a “goody” bag with typically; a toothbrush, paste, and flosser in it. But since most of us usually buy our preferred brand of such things, we just put the bag in the closet. Likewise, when staying in a hotel, every room gets more soaps and cleansers than we can use. Grab the surplus and bring them home. Also, there is a need for feminine hygiene products, deodorant, surplus reading glasses, and a variety of other common, unused, non-prescription products.

You can help! Atheists of Florida is leading a campaign that involves all TB-CoR organizations, to gather and distribute these items through police departments, soup kitchens, and other non-religious venues to those in need.

Do you have hotel size soaps, body wash and shampoos you don't need? We cannot use big bars of soap or shampoo, and none that have been opened.

How about toothbrushes and toothpastes from your dentist? (they don't have to be as small as the one in the picture. Again, they must not have been opened.)

Other items of personal hygiene can be included.

Just bring any of these items to your next meeting (any meeting will do, it will get to us.) Group leaders will see to it that these items will get to the place they will do the most good. Don't have any of these but want to help? Just give the head of the group a $1 to help provide one homeless person with some personal hygiene products.

Your participation can also involve serving as liaison person for your group.

And, you can go to Amazon and buy items cheap in larger quantity, and have it shipped to you. Bring them in, then encourage others to participate.

This is a wonderful opportunity the true spirit of social responsibility that secularists have at every level. For more details, write: helping@aof.ngo.
